Hearn and put out the side.

Woodling hit a homer in the

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By DAVE STOCK and IRVING STRICKLAND

A Winnipeg woman has written saying British Columbia is wrong in making a gift of earrings and a necklace to Princess Elizabeth and cuff links to Prince Philip. What do you think?

H. C. Cook, of Hiscocks & Clearhugh drug store, Lakeview Avenue—"I agree with the woman. The Prince and Princess have so much jewelry already they'll probably just put what we give them in a bureau drawer, and forget about it once they get home. I understand somebody's going to give them two Indian sweaters for their son and daughter. That's a good idea. They'll appreciate that."

Miss Shirley Martin, clerk at Stewart's Shoe Store, 2119 Chambers Street—"It would be nice if they gave them the money. Instead, and let them put it to use in England, helping the needy children. They need it more over there than we do here."

The situation there is really grim. I think they'd appreciate that. They've got so much jewelry now they don't know what to do with it. Just as they've got so many clothes. Some people think we're making too much fuss about this Royal visit. I don't know about that. I think it's only natural to give them a "good reception."

George Murrell, proprietor of The Bazaar, 2618 Scott Street—"What would you give them that they'd really appreciate? What does he care for a pair of cuff links? The money could be given to the Solarium or some children's hospital in their name. If you give them the jewelry, they can't go and pawn them. They will just have them to look at."

Miss Jessie Robinson, stenographer at Harbord Insurance, 32 Marlborough Street—"I don't know. Having never been a princess, I don't know whether I would rather have jewelry or a bed in a hospital. Coming from Manitoba, though, the suggestion is a very practical one—very practical for British Columbia, that is."

Bill Stothers, appliance manager at Fairbanks-Morse, Royal Oak—"My immediate thought is that it would be much more suitable to dedicate a bed at the Solarium or in another children's hospital to mark the occasion of their visit. I feel that the Princess and her husband would be more favorably impressed with such an act rather than have gifts presented to them. As the Winnipeg woman suggested, the jewelry which we would give her will seem insignificant compared with the family heirlooms already in her possession."

CROWN PROSECUTOR WARNED

'You Will Encounter Pressures'

"From some of the highest quarters you will encounter pressures you will have to ignore. Your duty will be to prosecute fairly and squarely for all."

That was the message from Claude L. Harrison, retired as city prosecutor, to his successor, James J. Proudfoot, at a reception in his honor Friday afternoon in Douglas Hotel.

"The job of prosecutor is the toughest type in the city. You will find that out as you go along," said Mr. Harrison. Mr. Harrison, who has announced he will run for mayor in the December election told the new prosecutor that "you'll bump into a lot of complex laws we've got laws which are getting worse all the time."

Mr. Proudfoot paid tribute to Mr. Harrison as a man recognized as the most capable cross-examiner in British Columbia.

The ex-prosecutor spoke highly of the manner in which Victoria police performed their duties. He referred briefly to the prosecutor's "tough role" in Victoria's earlier days when the city was "wide open."

"Old Victoria was pretty rough and there was plenty of the rough-and-tumble element a prosecutor had to contend with," Mr. Harrison reminisced.

Reception was arranged by police commissioners James Neely and Brent Murdoch.

Messages conveyed to Mr. Harrison by police, city and court officials expressed appreciation for a 40-year job well done.

"Throughout the years the court and community have been indebted to you for your abilities and treatment of all on an equal basis," said Magistrate H. C. Hall.

FIRE TOO HURRIEDLY

George Buckingham, in court yesterday at Duncan for illegally shooting a willow grouse, explained to Magistrate G. A. Tisdall "I fired in too much of a hurry and hit a willow in a blue grouse covey." It cost him $10. David Wardell got the same fine for a similar offence.

When Methuselah Was a Boy

Pharmacy is one of the world's oldest professions. It was a recognized art long before the time of Methuselah. In centuries past, herbalists and medicine men had their concoctions and mystic rituals, which were both comfort and succor to the ailing. The advent of scientific medicine and pharmacy brought an end to mysticism and empiricism, but service to the sick has remained the first concern of the pharmacist. Today the pharmacist is not a diagnostician, nor is he qualified to prescribe medication. Compounding and dispensing the physician's prescription is the pharmacist's specialty. That is our lifework, and we appreciate the opportunity to serve.

Jury Asks Probe Of Jail Hospital; Death Sequel

BURNABY (CP)—A full investigation into the hospital at Oakalla Prison Farm was demanded today by a coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of Daniel Leroy Sanger.

The jury found that Sanger, a 60-year-old Victoria man awaiting trial on a charge of murder, died of a heart condition after he had arrived at the prison.

Warden J. H. Millman, brought back from his holidays to testify, was questioned for 20 minutes today. The inquest opened yesterday but adjourned today to allow the warden to testify.

He said he had not been notified officially of Sanger's death until nearly 12 hours after he had died. He was on annual leave at the time, but was in town.

Warden Millman also admitted, in reply to a question by the jury foreman, that he was not satisfied with hospital conditions at the prison. He said he had brought the conditions to the attention of the department which is charged with responsibility of the prison, four or five times in the past few years.

"We are overcrowded," he said, "and we have had no expansion of hospital, in spite of my complaints."

The warden said he had tried previously to have a permanent doctor attached to the prison staff, but had never been successful in obtaining one.

The coroner's jury, in a rider to its verdict, recommended also: A resident doctor be attached permanently to the prison.

A qualified medical orderly with first aid certificate be on duty at the prison hospital at all times.

The attorney-general be notified of the lack of medical information and necessary medical treatment given to prisoners by Victoria city police to R.C.M.P. officers acting as prisoner escorts.

The murder charge on which Sanger was to have been tried resulted from the death of 24-year-old Mrs. Gwen Casswell, whose body was found in his basement apartment in Victoria on Sept. 9.

Take Grandpa into one of the modern mines or plants of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company. Show him the big machines, the fine tools and the safer, healthier working conditions. Tell him about the shorter hours, the higher wages and vacation with pay. He just wouldn't believe it.

Those who work for Cominco have other benefits Grandpa never even dreamed of. Apprenticeships for young men, housing loans for married couples, pensions for the old timers, life insurance and assisted hospital and medical protection for all, and many other plans.

Profits made all these advances possible. The constant "plowing back" of these profits* makes them secure. "Yes, if it weren't for 'Company Profits', we could very easily be back in Grandpa's day."

*$63,000,000 from Company profits is now being spent on new projects. The completion of these projects will mean the addition of 800 permanent jobs.

The Leper's Bell

IN THE ALICE-IN-WONDERLAND state of current politics it becomes necessary for Mr. Abbott to defend his large revenue surplus, as if it were something shameful, almost worse than a deficit.

It has to be defended against a Conservative party which, by its historic principles, should regard a surplus as the best proof of good national house-keeping. If there could be anything more conservative—in the best sense of that term—than a surplus of revenue over expenditure we cannot imagine what it is. Nevertheless Mr. Abbott has to carry the surplus like a leper's bell.

You would think, to hear men like Mr. Drew talk, that every dollar which Mr. Abbott collects above what he spends was lost to the people of Canada. You would think that the government took the money for itself and spent it secretly on yachts and blondes.

Where does this so-called surplus go? It goes to reduce our gigantic national debt of $11 billion, which hangs like a millstone around the taxpayer's neck, costing him in interest every year almost as much as the whole federal budget before the war.

Canada, as Mr. Abbott says, is like a man with a heavy mortgage on his house. When he manages to save a little out of his income to reduce his mortgage and his monthly interest charges he is improving his position.

Suppose Mr. Abbott had no surplus, suppose he took something like a half a billion dollars which he will save this year in reducing the debt and turned it back to the public. What would happen to that money? It would be spent by the public on goods, most of it anyway. But that would not increase by a single loaf of bread the goods available to the Canadian people. They are not limited by the amount of money in circulation. They are limited by the capacity of the farm and factory to produce them and both farm and factory are working at full capacity.

The extra money would be used only to bid up prices. The so-called surplus thus is in itself a strong measure against inflation, apart from its long-term effect in reducing debt and interest charges. But the surplus is misnamed. In fact it is not a surplus at all except in a mere bookkeeping sense.

A man with a crushing mortgage on his house who saves a fraction of his wages to pay off this debt by degrees certainly would not feel that he had any surplus. That is the nation's position precisely.

We have a surplus, for the time being and only for the time being during an unprecedented boom, on current account. In relation to our debt and to the problem of inflation we could more wisely consider ourselves in deficit and act accordingly.

That is what Mr. Abbott is trying to do with his famous half billion but he is getting no help from the other political parties and very little from the public which he is trying to serve. At the forthcoming session the most popular sport in Parliament, among the opposition members, will be the constant ringing of the leper's bell.

Sure Instinct Of Democracy

WHATEVER MAY HAVE BEEN THE surrounding influences, Australians moved with a sure instinct for democracy when they rejected a recent referendum that would have amended their constitution to deal with communism.

The power, sought by the Menzies administration, would have passed into law the Communist Party Dissolution Bill.

The people's refusal to grant that authority is by no means an indication of sympathy for communists. Australians in the main are wholeheartedly behind the campaign to remove communism from the labor unions. Their action, on the other hand, is interpreted as a determination on the people's part to avoid any constitutional change which would reduce existing protection afforded to minorities. Communism they do not want. But they are not prepared to place in the hands of their government a weapon which, while it might be highly effective against communism, could conceivably be directed against other minorities.

The Australian voters apparently feel that sufficient power is now enjoyed by the government to beat the red evil under existing law. Their attitude, as has been the attitude of Canada, may be suitably described in a paraphrase: Not that they dislike communism less, but that they love democracy more.

Young Man Who Brings The News

AT THIS SEASON EACH YEAR newspapers in Canada and the United States salute one of the important people in their organization—the newspaper boy. It is not that they give him consideration on one day only. He is very much with them during the rest of the year, but today is singled out specifically to honor him.

The newspaper boy, the lad who carries your paper to you, is often the most frequent contact you have with the human organism which devotes its energies and talents to the service of providing you with news in convenient and readable form. He is the essential link between the producer and the consumer.

Yet it is not merely for that service that he deserves attention. He is a young businessman in his own right, learning and practicing the rudiments of successful and honest dealings with his fellow citizens, earning respect in direct proportion to the competence and courtesy with which he performs his tasks.

Many outstanding figures in the worlds of business and public life now look with appreciation to the training they received as newspaper boys. They recognize the ethics they learned in that occupation, the principles of business, the self-reliance they were required to develop and the sense of values that comes from a dollar honestly earned.

For these things they are thankful—and to today's newspaper boys they extend, with us of the craft, their good wishes and respect for a job done well.

Release In The 'World Serious'

THERE HAVE BEEN NO REPORTS announcing the termination of fighting in Korea during the World Series broadcasts. There have been no formal statements to the effect that the problems of international affairs have been temporarily shelved—despite a widely publicized passion for baseball on the part of one outstanding Canadian public figure. The great events march his torically on.

Yet for literally millions on this continent, the great games of the day are not for the moment Eisenhower, Bradley, Truman, St. Laurent or Pearson. They are, rather, names like Dark, Reynolds, Koslo, Durocher, Stengel—names that have moved from the sports section to the front page in what some residents of Brooklyn call the World Serious.

The historian of the future may marvel at the frenzy caused by two sets of gentlemen engaged in a simple athletic contest—may wonder how such an incongruity arose out of the forbidding times of October, 1951.

But he will be a detached historian and no philosopher at all if he lacks comprehension. Whether the Yankees beat the Giants or the Giants beat the Yankees will make no deep impression on the pages of time. But while they are deciding who beats whom, they hold the attention of millions—and some whole-some interest in the relatively inconsequential will transfer tensions in a way to ease the strain on worried humanity in a serious world.

Chips Off The Old Brock

By DAVID BROCK

THE Vancouver Sun has come out strongly (and editorially) in favor of a return to the Ten Commandments. And indeed, we need some of those ten laws very much today, though a few of them seem vastly more important than the rest.

Brock

whole of the Law and the Prophets hangs on two commandments only. (Matthew 22, 35-40.)

And here, I think, we might well delve into the laws governing the Sabbath as they apply in B.C. It seems to me that any British law in effect at the time of B.C.'s marriage with Canada is still in effect here except as revised or abolished by statute. If this is so, then poor old B.C. is in for it. I have just read in Country Life that under the Sunday Observance Act of 1877, you can't shoot, fish, or play golf on Sunday, unless you are under 14, or unless you play golf within your own parish. Under the Game Act of 1831 we may shoot rabbits and rooks on Sundays and Christmas Day, but not pheasants or grouse or half a dozen other birds. All milk must be delivered before 9 a.m. . . . does this mean Pacific Time or Greenwich Mean Time? I've got to know before I lay a charge.

AD TO THRIFT

MY CHILDREN tell me they need a 250 per cent raise in their weekly allowance. If what they are getting teaches them thrift, then a raise will teach them still more thrift. I suspect a fallacy here somewhere, but juvenile logic is hard to grapple with. Well, I have gone and invented Old Brock's System of Instilling Thrift by Means of Allowances. It works this way: having conferred with the shop stewards and settled on a fair sum, you pay the kids one whole year's allowance in advance. And get a receipt, if you have any sense.

"Here," you say, "here, you blasted little chartered accountants, you, here is a whole year's allowance. Let's see what you can do with it, if you're so doggone thrifty. There'll be no more till a year from today. I may even give myself three days of grace, you know."

This will rock them right back on their heels and make them think twice before teetering down to the corner for fresh bubble-gum and the old carbohydrates. They will taper themselves off, and join Candy Bars Anonymous.

MORE JUVENILE STUFF

A FRIEND asked me the other day why I was getting more affected and precious in my speech. I told him: "So my young won't know what I am saying about guys like you. I am guarding your reputation, no less. Now that they can spell, I have to talk in roundabout ways, as if I lived in Boston. Instead of telling my wife you were tight last night, I have to say 'Joe's hilarity was anything but infectious. Still, he seemed to be reinforcing himself all right.' And that girl with dyed hair you were escorting . . . I had to refer to the tinted locks of the affinity of Josephus." And now you reproach me for my jealous wail over all your interests. Ingratitude. Never saw the like." Joe didn't seem interested in making a reply, so I left it at that.

OVERSIGHT

A CHAP in Australia has invented a beer mug which sounds a buzzer when nearly empty, rings a gong when dry, gives an electric shock to trespassers, blows its own froth off, has a rear-view mirror, has a tube for drinking while lying down, and so on. But there seems to be an oversight. There is no walky-talky for calling up Friend Wife and opening negotiations. But perhaps, in such a perfect mug as this, there is a concealed gang of tiny but immensely tough dwarfs who spring out at a given word and batter the owner's wife over the head with little baseball bats until she promises to reform.

POME

WHEN any poet or any soprano sings fortissimo or piano Of feelings "inside the heart of me," It gives dull pain to some part of me. The head of me or the neck of me. Which doubtless is harsh as heck of me. And even a little insane of me. For it does bad things to the brain of me.

Mr Peeps' Diary

Being A Chronicle Of Our Times

MONDAY, 1ST—This month dawned bleak and chill, but with many affairs afoot, was loath to brood on't, and so set about me business. At Lougheed's restaurant were gathered a great press of people to eat scrambled eggs and bacon, and discourse of the day's collections for charity. At the church of "God Save the King," the citizens arose, and began to sing with feeling; but Master Bob Dickson's seering-eye dog Storm did not like the cacophony of voices, and began to bay most fearfully. Soon lips began to twitch, and eyes to water, and backs to shake; and without disrespect, these good people dissolved in uproarious laughter at this untimely intervention. Whereupon Master Milton King quipped: "I knew not that Reeve Bert Thomas possessed such a fine tenor voice." Later, these same persons, augmented by many friends, met at the Arena, where they heard most noble addresses by Master John Vickers and Master John Barraclough, and set forth bravely on their rounds. At 7.15 trudging through Saanich rain, I approached a handsome house, and perceived someone home, by the light of a flickering fire. I rang the bell three times, but they would not answer; and at the third ringing they set the dog upon me, I just beating him to the gate. At a humble house adjoining, I received a cheery welcome and two dollars, and I was saddened to contemplate the life of the mansion-owner, who would set an animal upon one soliciting for orphans, blind, sick and aged persons. Thus to the election rounds, finding His Worship philosophical in defeat; Master Mitchell happy; and Master Garnett Weston, the author, in good spirits at the headquarters of Cmdr. Wurtele. And I was much amused by Mistress Skillings, she saying: "If I ever find myself on the winning side of an election, I'll take to the hospital," whereupon Master Gordon Cameron roared: "Helen—not another baby!" Which she blushing denied, and her Waldo was much grinned by this remark. Hence to "Community Chest offices, finding it downcast and in lackluster spirit. Thus wearily home, taking some solace in the fact that this day hath brought victory to my Giants.

TUESDAY, 2ND—This morning I was awoken'd with the news that I'd been made an uncle, for the eighth time, my sister-in-law being delivered of a strapping boy, 8 lbs. 14 oz., as they used to weigh in times past. And I thank God this accouchement went well. At the Kiwanis Club, I found Masters John MacCormac, Arthur Roberts and Len Hope in mischievous mood, they much harassing a poor-speaker, who gave a most jumbled and incoherent address. Anon—to the counting-house, where Mistress Collison gave me a money-order, and I found Master McClintock deeply injured by the fate of the Giants, as was I. Thence early home for tea, but there was none in the house, whereat I took a broom and basted my girl most severely. In the evening, to the theatre to witness a splendid drama, "The Browning Version," most excellently played by Michael Redgrave, one of the great Thespians of our times. On the stage, there was a presentation of rustic melodies, which I do not like, but enlivened by the presence of Master Hugh Curtis, an uncured young blood stream of jaunty personality. Thus home and lulled to sleep by the rush of wind in the arbutus trees.

WEDNESDAY, 3RD—Up betimes and to my place of business, much admiring the Scots standard fluttering in the breeze over Master Ross Main's cookie factory. Comes to me Master David Armstrong, he drawing on a large hookah, which he put aside for a Havana cheroot, and left behind. So I will crate it up and dispatch it to him by ox-team. Anon I quit my affairs and went home to take up a book, "No People Like Show People," very light and diverting, which demonstrates these amiable people to be children, full of strange conceits. In the evening, I took me to the Theatre Royal, where I found the house infinite full. But God forgive me! I never was so little pleased with a concert of music in my life, the Hungarian dances sounding like Russian dirges. But I was much impressed with the embroidered, purple Chinese coat of a woman in the boxes. At the home of Mistress Sara Spencer came many splendid persons for coffee, they much admiring the high varnish of the woodwork in this home, soon to become a centre of the arts. I chatted with Misses Helen Effinger and Pat Provod, journalists from across the water, busy with intelligence of the Royal visit. Thus home, dry of throat from too many cheroots, which I slaked with a bedside pot of ale.

THURSDAY, 4TH—This morning I picked up my dog and took him to Dr. Ray Cranston for the injection of serums; and the poor beast was sad-eyed and shivering in these strange surroundings, like a child in a dentist's waiting room. At lunch I saw a splendid film, the work of Master Ernest Scott, which shames the product of many professionals. At my office comes calling two gentlemen from abroad: Master Sam Ross, a commentator of politics, in town to assay the post-election temper; and Master Ken Fosbery, who served on these shores as a naval officer. Strolling through the streets, I chatted with Master John Melville and his brother-in-law, Master Derek Tye, a former resident of this city who now directs the province's sea cadets, a noble venture for the training of seamen. By and by I went forth for my dog, finding him somewhat jumbled by his injections, and guilty of indiscretions in the office of Dr. Cranston, which blushed me to the marrow. Anon I took me home for the reading of a new novel by Mistress Gabrielle Roy, "Where Nests the Water Hen," a most precious title, but withal a sensitively-written book on the Catholic schools question in Manitoba, many years since.

FRIDAY, 5TH—This morning it rained: pheasants gabbled; quail whistled their flute-like notes; my dog moaned with his miseries, which caused my boy to squeal; and my wife, poor wretch, came down with a sore throat. So this was a noisome, bleary overture to the day's doings. I took my wife some coffee in a silver pot, the better to keep it warm, but she was too ill for the Jubilee Hospital soiree, so I returned my ticket to Capt. Ronnie Newell, much dismayed at missing the company of these pleasant people. At lunch I ate a chicken pot pie and discoursed of politics with Master Hutchison, who doodles on paper napkins so handsomely, that the girls snatch them up, and keep them as rare and dramatic examples of fugitive art. Thence to the hotel to meet Master C. W. Halford, who will direct activities of the telephone company on this island, and found these people in amazingly congenial receipt of journalists, who have thrashed them publicly for poor service, which they say will be righted anon. I chatted with Master Peard Sutherland, a collector of boys' books, who lacks only the 1982, '94-'97 volumes of Chums for a complete set; and Mistress Walker, whose grey hair and brown eyes lend her a rare beauty. Then to the Pacific Club where Master Arch Baillie, dapper in a jackanapes, sultry of blue, with grey cravat, and many men of affairs were gathered to hear a discourse on advertising by Master J. Neil Reagan, of Hollywood. This amiable fellow is the brother of Ronald Reagan, an actor who had his legs re-mov'd in the play "King of the Ring," and I was grateful to hear he is walking again. Now here was a genial company of ras-cals, and we sat late, sipping liqueurs and listening to the anecdotes of Master Reagan, very droll. Thence home through the rain. My dog was afloat, so I put him in the vegetable room and went to bed.

Variety Of 'Ministers In Attendance' Will Match Changes In Scenery For Royal Visitors

By MICHAEL BARKWAY, Correspondent of Saturday Night and the Victoria Daily Times, from Ottawa

THIS WEEKEND Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh will be flying to Montreal. The expectation is that they will land at Dorval airport around noon on Monday; wind and weather at this time of year make precise timing difficult. The Governor-General and Prime Minister St. Laurent will greet Their Royal Highnesses, and then disappear into seclusion on the Royal train. It may seem unglamorous to spend the first night in Canada parked in a train on a Quebec siding. But it's eminently sensible. After one night in trans-Atlantic flight, the little rest should be most welcome to the Princess before she starts the gruelling round of official events at Quebec on Tuesday.

Barkway

Tradition demands that wherever the King is he shall be accompanied by one of his ministers. Mr. Mackenzie King himself accompanied Their Majesties on the Royal tour of 1939. Similarly Princess Elizabeth and the Duke will always be accompanied by a "federal minister in attendance," to act as their host. This duty—or privilege—will be shared out on a regional basis. First minister in attendance for the trip to Quebec, will be Mr. Huges Lapointe, the Minister of Veterans Affairs; and it would have been difficult to find a more delightful companion for the Royal visitors. "Bob"

Lapointe is only 40. Son of the late Ernest Lapointe, Mackenzie King's chief French-speaking lieutenant, he is completely bilingual. He served overseas with the Regiment de la Chaudiere and became a lieutenant-colonel. He has that rare gift of being at home in any kind of company, and providing very good company himself.

At Montreal, Mr. Abbott and Mr. Rinfret, the Postmaster-General, take over as ministers in attendance. In Ontario a variety of ministers will cover different parts of the journey. In the western provinces, the federal minister from each province will accompany the party.

At the end of the tour, in the Maritimes, Mr. Gregg, V.C.; Mr. Bob Winters, the young Nova Scotian, Senator Wishart Robertson, and Mr. Gordon Bradley from Newfoundland, get the Princess and the Duke to visit the Prince Edward Islands. Before the tour is over the Princess and the Duke will be as impressed by the variety of Canadian politicians as they are by the variety of Canadian scenery.

It certainly takes all sorts to make a Cabinet. In Ontario alone, there'll be Paul Martin, bilingual, Roman Catholic, portly, bustling Minister of Health and Welfare. He is 48 now, and still a contender for the leadership of the Liberals whenever Mr. St. Laurent retires. There'll be Walter Harris, one of the newest of the Cabinet, currently the hottest tip for future eminence. In spite of his slightly boyish look he's only a year younger than Paul Martin. But he's got lots of brains under his curly black hair, and which is quite as important as uncommonly good political judgment. And of course there's "Mike" Pearson, 54, most traveled of the Cabinet, the best known outside Canada, far and away the most experienced at the tricky business of international relations.

From the Lakehead is the formidable figure of C. D. Howe, the man who knows what he wants and generally gets it. Then Stuart Carson in Manitoba, legal, precise, conscientious and charming: one of the least pretentious of them. In Saskatchewan the Royal couple will get a taste of old-time Western politics, the rough, hard sort. In his 67 years "Jimmy" Gardiner has been in every kind of political campaign there is. In the years of the post-war food contracts he's lambasted the British more than anyone else in Canada. And the odd thing is that the British representatives who have borne most of his lambasting are the first to say: "You know, I like old Jimmy."

RESTFUL, PLEASANT

In Alberta, it will be the Edmonton contractor, George Prudham, who will escort the Royal Couple. He's new not only to the Cabinet but to Parliament. He's a little stiff still, not the inspiring kind: but an honest, conscientious minister.

And then in British Columbia, where they are to have their first holiday, the Royal Couple will be in the hands of Bob Mayhew. I can't help thinking it will be restful and pleasant for them.

Opinions Of Our Correspondents

POLITICAL BREAKS

The letter which appeared on Saturday last, captioned "In Good Company," was very interesting, but the anonymous writer should take into account that the two young Liberals referred to—Ron B. Worley and H. K. Bates—at least had the courage to stand up for what they felt to be a principle. They are to be admired!

Experience does not have to enter into it when a principle is involved. After all do not let us belittle the fact that the Coalition did condemn Bennett, Rolston and Wurtele for breaking with the Conservatives, but their own candidate, of course, is supposed to be looked upon in a different manner.

On the other hand, the writer of the letter who signed, "Still a Liberal," must be considered somewhat insolent, as he or she did not even have the fortitude to add their signature.

CORRECTION AND PRAISE

With all due respect to Mr. Merriman's fine and deserving article about Fred Usher, appearing in the Magazine Section of the Times, Sept. 29, I should like, through the medium of your newspaper to correct Mr. Merriman on one point.

Mr. Merriman has not only credited my mother, Ethel Moore, and myself with composing our own two songs, "Echo Trail" and "Whispering Waves," but has erroneously bestowed on us the honor of composing "Blue Jeans and Cowboy Boots" and "Happy Trails," which honor rightly belongs to Cathie Southern, a talented Victoria song-writer.

Although Fred Usher and the "Hometowners" have nothing to gain for their efforts on behalf of Mrs. Southern and ourselves, they undertook the hard work and the almost impossible task of bringing our work to the point where several publishers have become interested in our songs. We have good reason to be sincerely grateful to the "Hometowners" and many more fine people in our own hometown, and believe me, we are!

It is the unselfish interest and the co-operation of such people that will open a new field in song-writing for all talented Canadian composers, and that will bring the day a little nearer when Canada is recognized in this field in her own right.

Big Game

Winnipeg Tribune

It is becoming increasingly evident that if big game are to be saved Canadian game laws will have to be made more uniform, prohibiting hunting from aeroplanes and providing much more severe penalties for infractions.

Manitoba regrets the necessity for barring American hunters from shooting moose, but will continue to welcome them to try their luck for bear as well as geese, ducks and upland birds. Just so long as they obey our game laws they will be wished good hunting.

ROYAL GIFT

A smart lass is your Winnipeg correspondent Phyllis Anderson, whose letter you published on Oct. 3.

I fear if she knew the B.C. government had also spent some $20,000 in new decorations for Government House, where the young couple are staying for 48 hours, she would explode. As confirmation of her criticism regarding giving jewelry to the Prince and Princess, I quote from Beaverbrook's London "Express" Sept. 9, 1951: "Margaret's personal friends are bemoaning that she would on her 21st birthday have so many jewels it would be a sheer waste to buy her any more and anyway they couldn't afford to buy anything to compare with the many very valuable heirlooms she would be given from the palace jewel room. She had to try on many of the beautiful tiaras before finding one to fit."

Of course Phyllis has not known the B.C. government as well as the people in Esquimalt. Hence her surprise.

ULTRA-CANADIAN FLAG

Hurray for Quebec! I say this in regard to their suggestion for an all Canadian flag, and a proposal for Canada Day, instead of Dominion Day. At last a few real Canadians have got the right idea to make Canada, Canada, instead of a British colony.

Creating a real Canadian flag would certainly be a step in the right direction; as would be making O Canada our national anthem. If immigrants want to come to Canada, let them come to Canada, and not a British colony.

Father Applies To Open Schools

VANCOUVER (CP).—Application was made in Supreme Court in Vancouver Friday for a mandamus compelling the board of school trustees of district 20, at Salmon Arm, to open the schools in the municipal district.

The action, taken by the father of three school-age children, resulted from the school board's decision to ban children of Salmon Arm municipality from the schools, following defeat of a municipal money by-law last Saturday.

Chief Justice Wendell B. Faris directed that notice be given to the trustees that the application will be heard in Vancouver next Friday.

The application was entered by Ross Alexander McLeod, resident of Salmon Arm municipality. He complains that more than 400 children in the rural areas have been without school facilities since October when the rural school was closed and the consolidated school in the City of Salmon Arm was closed to them (Oct. 1).

Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson recently held that a reduction allowed by a board of arbitrators in the school estimates must be spread over the whole area. But the municipal district claimed it cannot raise the additional funds, and that it has paid in everything which it is legally obligated to provide.

Freed From Jail

VANCOUVER (CP).—Thirty-two-year-old Alexander McDonald stepped out of Oakalla prison a free man Friday after three anxious months.

He was arrested March 30 and charged with participation in the $5,000 armed holdup of a Bank of Montreal branch here on March 28.

An Assize Court jury convicted him in the June assize and he was sentenced by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson to 14 years.

His conviction was quashed by the B.C. Appeal Court Tuesday and he was released Friday after the necessary legal formalities had been completed.

Anthony (Tony) Schlosser, arrested with McDonald and also convicted of the holdup, is waiting his appeal from a 20-year sentence for his part in the crime.

"I'm not bitter at the witnesses that fingered me," McDonald said. "But I sure got a raw deal from the Vancouver City cops."

Miraculous Escape

VANCOUVER (CP).—Trapped in the cab of his truck, Karnail Sangha was rescued Friday after a hacksaw was used to open the door.

The 18-year-old truck driver was carried 260 feet in his truck when it was struck by a tram. Witnesses described his escape from death as "miraculous."

Sangha was injured, but his condition was reported as "fair" by hospital attendants last night. J. McCormack, a member of the tram crew, was also injured, suffering cuts from flying glass.

Labor War Spreads

PENTICTON, B.C. (CP).—The jurisdictional war between the Canadian Congress of Labor and the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada Friday spread to the Okanagan Valley fruit industry.

The United Packinghouse Workers' Association (C.I.O.) Friday applied to the Labor Relations Board for bargaining rights in a cannery here where the Fruit and Vegetable Workers' Union (T.L.C.) is negotiating for a wage increase.

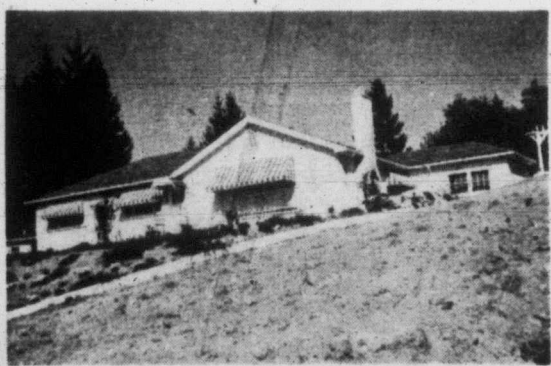

Bill Symington, agent for the Packinghouse Workers' Association, said the action here was part of a national drive in packing-houses and canneries.

"We're not raiding," he said. "We're merely going into the plants at the request of the workers."

Unconscious Boy May Recover

WINNIPEG (CP).—An unconscious boy attempted to cry this week as his mother cradled him in her arms, and new hope was given for the child's recovery.

Three-year-old Barry Rushford has been unconscious since a horse kicked him in the head at his farm at Eriksdale, Man., on Aug. 13. He has lain stiff and white in hospital since. He is fed by a tube.

This week, the child opened his eyes, but he apparently could not see. His mother, Mrs. C. F. Rushford, cradled him in her arms. She said he seemed to respond to her presence and made a strangled attempt to cry.

Doctors can't guarantee anything in a case like this said the young mother, who has kept a constant vigil near her son.

"But there seems to be a good possibility that Barry may come out of his coma."

Tory Gov't Might Include Liberals

LONDON (CP).—The first attempt to plumb the depths of Winston Churchill's recent reference to a "broadly-based" government appears today in the British press.

The Daily Mirror says in a front-page story that one conclusion drawn from the Conservative leader's speech is that one or two Liberals may be offered government posts if Churchill wins the Oct. 25 election.

"Stories are current in Westminster," the pro-Labor newspaper says, "that although the Liberal party is supposed to be going into the general election as a completely independent force, certain of its leaders may be offered—and might accept—posts in a Churchill government, if the Tories won."

The story says this speculation arose from Churchill's speech at Liverpool last Wednesday, in which he spoke of a "broadly-based" government. In the same speech, Churchill promised that in a Tory administration there would be no "dull exclusion of Liberal and independent forces." Conservatives at first denied, then declined comment, when asked whether Churchill might be throwing out a feeler for some form of national government. The general feeling is that certainly no coalition is contemplated, but that Churchill might be more receptive than Labor has been towards the small Liberal party, of which he was once a member himself. Churchill is to speak at a Liberal meeting in Huddersfield, Oct. 15, in support of Lady Violet Bonham Carter, a life-long Liberal.

The Daily Mirror speculates that Lady Violet might become education minister in a Conservative government.

*MRS. IRIS NORTH...

How do you and your husband save, Mrs. North?

We save something out of everything my husband earns. He has a theory that you should save 10 cents out of every dollar of income!

What do you do with the money?

Buy Canada Savings Bonds.

Why?

Because they're guaranteed by the Dominion Government. The way we figure it out is that if you buy something that costs $100 you want it to be worth $100, and this is definitely the case with Canada Savings Bonds. They are always worth, and can always be cashed at, full value.

What method do you use to purchase the bonds?

We pay so much down at the bank and have the rest deducted from our savings account. The bonds are registered in my name but belong to both of us.

Have you bought Canada Savings Bonds regularly?

Yes. Every issue.

Do you intend to invest in Canada Savings Bonds again this year?

Certainly.

Have you had occasion to use any of the bonds you have bought?

Yes, so that my husband and his brother could buy out a business concern.

What is your basic purpose in saving?

So that when we get older we won't have to work so hard and will be protected against emergencies. Like when our house was badly flooded during the Winnipeg flood of 1950. The house was really damaged. You should have seen it. We had to live elsewhere from May to September. The government and insurance actually looked after most of the repairs, but when we didn't know what help we would get it was a wonderful thing to know that we had money in Canada Savings Bonds that we could use if we had to.

NOW BETTER THAN EVER
• Canada Savings Bonds—Sixth Series—mature in 10 years and 9 months from date of issue and bear ten 3½% coupons. The first coupon covers 1 year and 9 months and matures on August 1st, 1953; subsequent coupons mature August 1st each year thereafter until maturity. If cashed before August 1st, 1953, simple interest is paid at 2% per year calculated monthly. If held to maturity the overall yield is equivalent to 3.21% per annum. The limit for holdings in any one name is $5,000 in the Sixth Series. The bonds are cashable at full face value plus interest at any time at any bank in Canada. They are registered in the owner's name. • They are non-assignable and non-transferable.

*Mrs. Barbara Iris North, housewife, lives at 242 Scotia St., Winnipeg. Her husband, Herbert C. North, is a general insurance agent. Both are natives of rural communities in Manitoba. Prior to her marriage in 1940, Mrs. North, the former Iris Campbell of Austin, Man., was a country school teacher. She taught at Austin and Roblin. She is the mother of a girl, Barbara, aged 8. She has a brother working in the Bank of Montreal at Maple Creek, Sask. The residence of Mr. and Mrs. North was badly flooded during the 1950 Winnipeg flood. Mrs. North is one of more than a million Canadians who save regularly with Canada Savings Bonds.

Government Relaxes Housing Loan Terms

OTTAWA (CP)—The government announces it is going to give a transfusion to the somewhat anemic housing industry. To spur slackening production, it is going to give slightly larger loans and easier terms. Resources Minister Winters, who administers Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the government agency which finances builders, says "special emphasis" will be placed on homes for defense workers. He announced yesterday that the corporation shortly will boost National Housing Act loans to 80 per cent of an agreed maximum sales price for ordinary civilian homes. At present the maximum loan is 80 per cent of the appraised value based on January, 1950. This step would make possible a larger loan. At present a builder can sell a loan-financed house for whatever he can obtain. Central Mortgage also will provide housing loans for defense workers in specified areas on the basis of a down-payment of 10 per cent with 25 years to pay off the remainder. This is a new provision under the National Housing Act. Mr. Winters said the corporation will reinstitute the rental insurance plan under which a builder may obtain an 80-per-cent loan for multiple dwellings of not less than eight units if he agrees to fixed rentals for each unit for three years. This plan is expected to prove a big boost for apartment blocks. At present loans for such projects also are based on 1950 values but the builder may charge whatever rent he can get. He will still be able to get a loan on that basis if he cannot agree to fixed rentals. The areas where the special financing arrangements for defense housing are to apply will be designated by Defense Production Minister Howe. These are expected eventually to include every area where major defense establishments are located. Details of the new financing plans are to be issued shortly by Central Mortgage and Housing.

TRADE LOSS Oatis Will Be Costly Hostage

VIENNA (UP).—The imprisonment of Associated Press correspondent William N. Oatis will soon cost Czechoslovakia more than $400,000 a year in trade losses, U.S. officials said today. The officials said the Communist satellite country already has lost $11,000,000 in hard currency trade and vital imports since April 23, when the Reds seized Oatis and charged him with espionage.

"And that's only the beginning," they added. They cited the fact that starting Nov. 1 Czechoslovakia's trade privileges with the U.S. will be suspended under a recent decision of the International Organization for General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

That step will boost Czech trade losses to a rate of about $3,400,000 a month, according to the officials.

The important Czech textile industry particularly has been hit. Officials said U.S. cotton exports to that country virtually have ceased and that the Czech factories have been seriously hit.

CIGARETTES CUT OFF

An informal embargo also has cut off Czech imports of leading brands of U.S. cigarettes, which the Czechs formerly resold in Vienna and Berlin for black market dollars.

The officials said Czech exports to the U.S., normally amounting to some $2,500,000 a month, had dropped by 80 per cent since Aug. 1 and probably would cease altogether.

The officials said the Czechs, apparently fearing the U.S. or other Allies may seize their bank accounts in the west, are offering discounts of 4½% on Czech goods purchased in Prague on a cash and carry basis.

THE CHURCH PAGE

By LANCE WHITTAKER

The combination of Thanksgiving services and observance of world-wide communion on Sunday will make tomorrow a special day in most of Victoria's churches. In fact, many have already held harvest festival services in order to devote this week-end to the communion, others will hold harvest home next week.

One city congregation which will be out in force is that of James Bay United Church, where a new Hammond organ will be dedicated to the memory of Justin Gilbert.

Mr. Gilbert, a worker in James Bay church for 55 years, is being remembered by his old friends and fellow church members in this practical gift.

At tomorrow evening's dedication service the organ will be heard for the first time when the guest organist, Roland Webster and the choir of Victoria West United Church, leads the congregation in hymns which were Mr. Gilbert's favorites. (He was James Bay choir leader for many years.)

City Clerk Frank Hunter, who worked with Mr. Gilbert for nearly half a century, will speak on the life of his friend. Rev. S. V. H. Redman will conduct the service, and Gilbert-Margeson is soloist.

On Oct. 14 the congregation of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Victoria West, will celebrate the 60th anniversary of the opening of that church.

Although Sept. 30, 1931, is the date of the actual opening, the work of the founder and first minister, Dr. MacRae, dates back to 1885 when he commenced his ministry in Semple's Hall, Victoria West.

Realizing the need for a church in the Victoria West district, a building committee was formed consisting of Dr. MacRae, Robert Semple and D. J. McDonald, and on May 21, 1891, this committee met at the office of Mr. Soule, the architect, and authorized him to let the contract for the new church. The present building with certain additions is the result of the plans of the architect and the building committee.

Next Sunday, the present congregation will commemorate the 60 years of service which the church has since given. It will be a great occasion for St. Paul's, and we hope next week to be able to devote more space on this page to a history of the church itself and the people who have given their lives to its progress.

We are planning to modernize our living room. Do you recommend Sylva-Cord panels?

—Mrs. G. W.

By all means, Sylva-Cord's distinctive embossed design will give your living room an unobtrusive background of beauty to set off your furniture and drapes. Sylva-Cord's die-hardened surface makes a responsible base for your painting ideas.

I'm planning to use Sylva-Cord to panel the living room of my home. How do I hide the joints where the panels butt together?

—Mr. J. B. F.

You won't have any unsightly joints. The decorative pattern of Sylva-Cord makes each panel blend with the next to give you a continuous wall design.

What exactly is Sylva-Cord and how long would these panels last in my new home?

—Mrs. N. E.

Sylva-Cord is real Douglas Fir Plywood pressure-moulded to produce its unique embossed pattern. This compresses the wood fibres and makes a die-hardened surface that resists scuffing. Your Sylva-Cord walls will be beautiful and crackproof for the lifetime of your home.

NEWS OF CITY CHURCHES

Week Has Thanksgiving Theme

presentation of the cantata, "The Rolling Season," given in conjunction with Thanksgiving observances.

Giving thanks among Gospel Hall congregations will be celebrated in a special way when a Bible Conference begins tonight at 8 in the Oaklands Gospel Hall. The week-end services will continue at 3 and 7:30 p.m. Sunday, and at 2:45 and 7 p.m. Monday. Guest speakers at the meetings will include W. W. Reid, Vancouver; Walter Purcell, Portland; D. Donaldson, Winnipeg; and W. Sheratt of Oakland, Calif.

The meeting took the form of a combined social and devotional gathering, with girls of the mission circle conducting the devotional period.

Hon. W. T. Straith gave an informative and amusing lecture on his recent trip to the British Isles and Europe.

At Sunday's evening service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian, organist and choirmaster, C. C. Warren, will lead the choir in a with which we can compare Hitler's massacres in countries he conquered?

We may disregard and pass over such things in the Biblical record too lightly. But, if they were all, or even a dominant part of the record, there would be reason to avoid it, and not study it at all.

It is the fact, though, that through and beyond the dark pages so much shines that is not only good, but sublime and prophetic of greater things to come.

Why should not all our attention be concentrated upon the New Testament and the life and teachings of Jesus? Why is it not enough to study those portions of the Old Testament that mark the highest development of religion in the Hebrew prophets and poets, and those Acts and Epistles that interpret and stress the meaning and application of the Christian Gospel and the Christian life?

Why should we delve far back into the early history of the Jewish people, or for that matter of any people, where life and times were crude, and characters and incidents were not always marked by high integrity and moral enlightenment?

Is it not embarrassing to read of Abraham's serious lapse from truthfulness (Genesis 12:10-20), of Jacob's crookedness and deceptiveness (Genesis 27:18-46), and the Jews' destruction of their conquered enemies (Deuteronomy 2:34) in an act of genocide

COATES MISSING FOR SHAMROCK GAME MONDAY

The Victoria Shamrocks will play host to the Peterborough Petes in an exhibition tilt here. The Petes and Combines will square off for their final game of the Mann Cup playoffs tonight at Kerrisdale Arena, and then will travel here for the holiday fixture on Thanksgiving Day.

Norm Coates, who is recovering from a toe operation, will not see action in the Memorial Arena game. The Victoria-Peterborough game will be preceded by a sudden-death game for the B.C. juveniles box lacrosse championship between the Victoria juvenile all-stars and the winner of the North Burnaby-Chilliwack semifinal.

FINAL TONIGHT

Petes Plaster Combos--Good

VANCOUVER (CP).—The battle for the Canadian lacrosse championship—a good, big team against a good, little team—comes right down to the wire tonight.

Peterborough Petes clubbed Vancouver Combines 14-3 last night to square the best-of-seven series at three games each and send the Mann Cup final into the deciding fray tonight at Kerrisdale Arena here.

The easterners' weight advantage—more than 15 pounds a man—ground Vancouver into the boards in the first half and then Petes trod over the remains unmercifully to pump in 11 goals in the second.

Petes, led last night by Vancouver's speed in the previous match, stepped into Combines from the start and slowed them to a walk. They smashed their passing plays and set up a defense ring around goalie Moon Wootton that the westerners couldn't crack.

LEE OUTSTANDING

Only a sensational outing by 38-year-old Walt Lee in Combines kept them off the first three quarters. He saved 27 drives to 21 for Wootton. He was most effective in the first half when Combines were still in the game.

Petes led 2-1 after the first quarter and 3-2 at the half. But by that time, Vancouver had taken such a harsh pummeling they were no longer the speed-burners of their three victories.

Combines scored the first goal last night and tied it 2-2 at 8:36 of the second period. Petes went ahead at 13:32 of the second quarter and Vancouver didn't see them again.

Nip O'Hearn, playing far and away his best game of the series, and Dootch Vitelli threw in three goals apiece. Imperturbable Russ Slater and Shifty Bob Thorpe popped in two each and singles went to Harry Whipper, Denny Peterson, Merv McKenzie and Don McPhail.

Alex MacKay, Bus Byford and Jim Swanson netted for Vancouver.

KINNA CLOBBERED

When Slater scored his second goal in the last period to give Petes an 11-2 lead, his stick whirled around and caught Vancouver defenseman Jim Kinna in the face. Kinna jumped on Slater and crushed him to the floor.

A fight broke out and Vancouver came off second best in penalties. Three Combines and one Pete went off. Play was stopped 10 minutes while cushions and programs thrown on the floor by the full house of 3,000 were gathered up. With the two extra men, Petes failed to beat Lee.

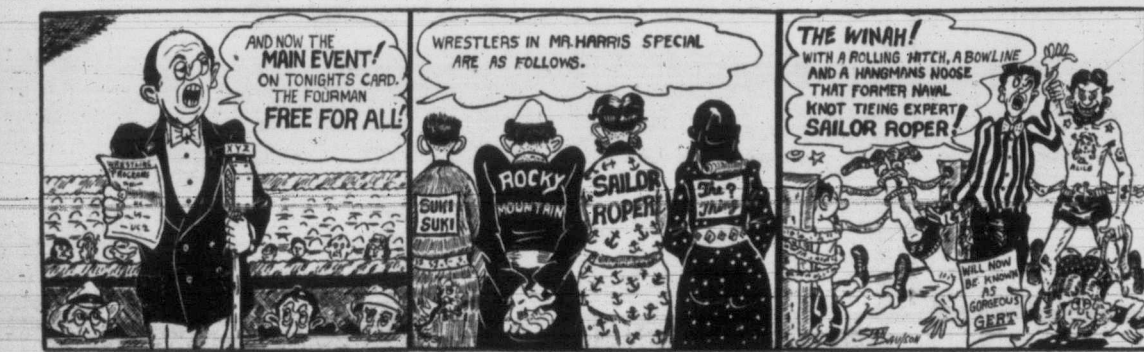

First Quarter—1. Vancouver, Byford (Bakich) 3:08. 2. Peterborough, Vitelli 5:14. 3. Peterborough, O'Hearn (McPhail) 12:48. Penalty—Peterson.

Whip Poor Excuse For Canucks In Ice Opener

By BILL WALKER

VANCOUVER—"Kid Line," copyright, Oct. 5, 1951. That's the tag that hangs from the shoulders of Bob Frampton, Reg Abbott and Andy Heberton today as the 1951 Pacific Coast Hockey League race is officially under way. And with that opening in Vancouver last night the Cougars are right smack dab back where they left off last season—on top of the heap.

The 8-2 coup over the Canucks was accomplished mainly through the efforts of the three aforementioned Cougars who until their appearance in Vancouver were in danger of having their patent pseudonym pilfered by a couple of other youth lines blossoming up around the circuit.

However, there's little danger of any plagiarism from such centres as Edmonton, whose Flyers have a baby line, and Vancouver, where Coleman E. Hall's Canucks have their version of a tender threesome. The real kids took care of that in brilliant fashion last night.

The old man of the triumvirate—Bob Frampton at 22 years, eight months, set the pattern with three first-period goals and then proceeded to equal a league record by assisting on three other markers as the Cougars riled Phil McAtee to no end.

Frampton Goes On Parade

Frampton got his first by blasting a bullet drive off McAtee's pads at 11:44, his second 14 seconds later on a pass out by Abbott and his third of the period at 18:56 after stepping on the ice following a penalty for interference. Gogean fed him a perfect pass on the play.

Seven minutes into the second stanza McIntyre, using Heberton as a decoy, slipped a low shot into the corner and the Cougars led 4-1. Heberton then ruffled McAtee's dignity for the fifth time on a picture play with his playmate at 7:53 and Abbott and Bowness ran the string up to 7-1 before the period ended.

The Vancouver defense was sieve-like at this juncture as all four second-period markers were the result of breaks from abortive play.

However, and mark that word, Leger was not impressed with what he saw on the ice. "We weren't good, the Canucks were terrible," is the way the four-faced coach expressed the final result.

And quite frankly, Leger was making no attempt at subterfuge. The Cougars deserved to win and the Canucks—well, Murphy Chamberlain has a problem on his hands, and a big one. And just to make sure that the Cougars, don't get too blasé, Leger will take the entire troupe to Nanaimo tomorrow night for four more days of training at two sessions a day before putting the team on view before the Capital City faithful Friday night at 8 p.m.—Tony Hemminger's Seattle Ironmen.

It should also be noted that the line-up is far from settled as Doug Anderson, a centre; Dewar Thompson, a centre; Gordie Kerr, a left winger, and "Dugger" McNeill, a defenseman, will be on hand to bid for a spot on the Cougars—1951-52 edition. Thompson and McNeill were assigned to the Cougars yesterday by Montreal Canadiens.

NEW YORK (UP).—Featherweight champion Sandy Saddler and ex-titholder Willie Pep were under indefinite suspensions by the New York Athletic Commission today because of their rough-house title fight, Sept. 26.

Pep's license to fight in New York State was revoked and Saddler suspended indefinitely yesterday in a 15-minute hearing conducted by Robert K. Christenberry, New York State Athletic Commission chairman.

Because of the suspension, Saddler will lose a non-title fight that had been tentatively arranged with Paddy Demarco of Brooklyn at Madison Square Garden, Nov. 9. Saddler lost a disputed split decision to Demarco at Milwaukee recently.

Saddler and Pep will be unable to fight in the nine other areas that have working agreements with New York. The areas are Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Michigan, New Hampshire, Cuba and Ontario (Canada).

Charley Johnston, Saddler's manager, was fined $100 and suspended for 30 days because he protested too loudly in the title fight at the Polo Grounds. Both fighters were charged with "dirty" fighting. Saddler won on a technical knockout after Pep, who suffered a gashed right brow, would not come out for the 10th round.

Curve-Balling Cuties Stealing Series Glory

NEW YORK (AP).—The belief that miracles can go on happening in the Polo Grounds, together with the form chart on world series pitching, sustained the underdog New York Giants today.

With curve-baller Jim Hearn (17-9) slated to oppose New York Yankees' fireballing Vic Raschi (21-10) in the third game of the series, Giant manager Leo Durocher can take comfort in the result of the first two tilts, in which his club broke even.

Both times, the cutie with the curve bested the fellow with the fast ball. When lefty Ed Lopat threw a seven-hitter to beat the Giants and Larry Jansen 3-1 yesterday, it was strictly a turnabout for the dipey-doodle stuff Dave Koslo threw successfully when he bested Allie Reynolds of the Yanks in the opener.

Not that miracles are needed by this daring, carefree Giant club. Still the bookmakers quote the Yanks at 8-to-5 favorites in the series.

MEMORIES LINGER

Memories of Wednesday's dramatic pennant clincher still throb in the mind of every Giant. In the chummy old park where they knew their greatest glory, the Giants figure to be an inspired crew.

Monte Irvin, hitting .778 and edging up on a record with seven series hits, needs no inspiring. He is well on the way to becoming the "51 hero, win or lose."

But the Giants will need a top effort from Hearn, a five-hit winner over Brooklyn in the playoff opener, to guide them past Raschi in this duel of right-handers.

Hearn's sweeping curve and baffling sinker hogtied the Dodger bats Monday in one of his most brilliant moments. Now with four days' rest the $10,000 waiver bargain of '50 is asked to put the Giants back in command.

Each club is minus a regular outfielder going into the three-day stand at the Polo Grounds. Right-fielder Don Mueller, injured in the playoff final, probably won't see any action for the Giants. Hank Thompson, a converted third baseman, is taking his place.

MANTLE INJURED

Mickey Mantle, the 19-year-old Yank rookie, twisted his right knee yesterday and was carried from the field. X-rays will be taken today to determine the full extent of the injury. Stengel doesn't expect to get any more action out of the kid in the series.

It was a strange accident with Mantle, striding toward a fly ball that Joe DiMaggio eventually caught, falling flat on his face when the knee gave way. Apparently he stepped hard into some small hole.

Mantle's surprise drag bunt opening the game was an important factor in yesterday's Yank win over Larry Jansen. Bunting has been a Mantle weakness all season, but daily "morning practise" finally paid off.

When Phil Rizzuto followed with another bunt single that Whitey Lockman threw wild to first, Mantle scooted to third. He

On the OUTDOOR FRONT

By ROY THORSEN

Hunters of Greater Victoria next Saturday will give the hunter-farmer co-operative scheme its first tryout on the Saanich Peninsula when they take the trail for first bags of pheasants in 1951.

It is a new scheme for this part of the country and one which the hunting fraternity of the province will be watching closely—between the farmers of the municipalities of Saanich and Central Saanich and the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association.

The fish-game club is in the process of posting 1,000 signs on the properties of farmers who have come in on the plan.

The signs say that the farmers will only honor those hunters who can show fish game club membership cards. Sportsman's club prey Ray Ritchie says: "The hunter must contact the owner of the land personally and present membership cards. The hunter, if asked to leave card with property owner must do so and pick it up on departure... and hunter will not be allowed to go from one farm to another without first contacting each owner."

Ray said that most of the bigger farms in an area from McCue Valley on the east to Heils Range on the west to near Sidney on the north had come in under the scheme. There is the odd small farmer who had not consented to the hunter invasion "and if the land is not posted with our signs you can't go on it."

Ritchie said that a general meeting will be held at 8 next Wednesday night at the Club Sirocco for the purpose of coaching members on a few points of the scheme. It was originated because of the threat of a complete takeover of Saanich farms by the hunter-and under its provisions all who enter the lands must in all instances respect the rights of the property owner.

Co-Operation Keynote Of Plan

It is presumed that club-members will act as policemen and report others not affiliated who do not behave themselves on farmers' property.

"It is a good plan and one I hope will result in Saanich being kept open for the hunting class in the years to come," said Ritchie.

Club officials will go out again Wednesday to post other signs and to try and get other farmers into the fold.

Local sportsmen are irate over the policy of the forestry department on the game seasons.

Everywhere I went this week I heard complaints from nimrod that the forestry branch "should not have opened the forests to grouse hunters when they did—because of the extremely high fire-hazard conditions."

"We were prepared to let it go for a while knowing the bad conditions in the bush... and hunters should be complimented by the forestry officials when you consider that during that one week there were 50 times more hunters in the woods compared with loggers. Only one fire was started and it has not been proven it was started by a nimrod," one ardent hunter opined.

There was considerable dissension over the forestry branch's decision to open the woods last Monday morning.

"Heck you couldn't have started a forest fire with a blowtorch that week-end so why couldn't the woods have been opened to all shooters on Saturday. Only a few can go on week days," was another opinion aired by hunters.

Best trout fishing on the Island we've heard of this week is Lower Campbell Lake. Descriptions run from "good" to "marvelous," fly or troll anglers doing well, depending on conditions.

Mrs. Laura Hirst of the Oak Bay Boat House, backed by D.V.A. ambulance driver "Smiling Joe" Smith, said things have been kind of quiet off Oak Bay. Best offering is still grilse, the odd spring and coho also being taken—dodger and minnow still the best lure. Don Clark's score one day this week was nine grilse, one small spring.

Just Reelin' In The Line

On other trout fishing: Shawanigan Lake, coming on fairly good for fly and troll in evenings, says Stan Williams... Fair trout fishing at Big and Little Thefts, Elk and Prospect Lakes... same for fishing good at Salt Spring's St. Mary's and at Durranee, Florence and Prospect.

Cowichan River... good at mouth and headwaters. Williams tells us that Bill Hager bumped into a one-hour hatch of March Brown flies and followed this through to reel in four nice trout at the top end.

Good fishing at Nanaimo and Westwood Lakes. Should continue good if waters do not rise too quickly. Albert area is considered generally fair for trout.

Don Keirs of the game office (B 6613) has the data on the eastern 1951 seasons for European partridge, California quail and pheasants. Give him a buzz you fellows who are planning a trip in that direction.

Don't forget, you gun-toting sportsmen, the Thanksgiving Day trap-sket turkey-shoot at the Victoria Gun Club grounds on Albert Head Road has been canceled.

Few fishermen out this week in Saanich Inlet. Offering is mostly grilse, small springs and a few coho.

"But," says Harry Peard, "the boys have been taking humpback salmon on abalone spoons." Lance Littlewood, for instance, took three humps and six grilse. He said 5 to 6 in the early morning appears best for all types of fishing.

Our apologies to Bill Lucas and family for the "faux pas" on that picture of the wonderful catch of fish they took at Grizzly Lake, Cariboo, recently. Somehow, the sports department got the pix mixed with Fred Barr and the keen fishing offered at Queen Charlotte Islands.

The resumption of hunting on the Island brings reports of blue grouse offering in the Campbell River area still being spotty. It is still good in the Cowichan Lake country... Sooke seems to get the nod as the best buck deer hunting grounds.

Frampton Made A Habit Of This

It was a big night for the Cougars' "Kid Line" in Vancouver last night as the cats opened the season by drubbing Vancouver Canucks 8-2. Bob Frampton, shown beating Canuck goalie Red McAtee, with his third of three first-period markers, had the biggest night of all with six points to equal a league mark shared by several other players. Reg Abbott garnered five points and Andy Heberton three for a total contribution from the kids of 14 points. (A.P. Wirephoto)

Joltin' Joe To Jolt No More For Yankees.

By OSCAR FRALEY, United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP).—Joltin' Joe DiMaggio, the pride of the Yankees for 16 brilliant years, has decided to call it quits at the end of the current World Series.

The Yankee Clipper, hitless in seven straight trips to the plate in the first two games of the classic, confided this decision to friends among the Detroit Tigers.

And, as he tied a Babe Ruth record of playing in 10 world series, he was finding his baseball swan-song a sad one.

In the first game, DiMaggio flew to the outfield four times. In the second game yesterday he hit into a rally-killing double play with two on base and one out; struck out, and grounded out weakly to third base.

Manager Casey Stengel even considered briefly dropping DiMaggio out of the clean-up spot, he has held for so long.

NO CLEAN-UP

"But I tried that during the regular season and it didn't do any good," Stengel said. "The simple truth is that we don't have a number four hitter any more."

The accuracy of that statement is reflected in Joe's work for the season. He batted only .263, played in only 116 games and hit 12 home runs.

That isn't exactly a $100,000 payoff, which is the sum Joe has received the last two years. The word is that the Yankees will offer him $75,000 for next season, only because under baseball law a player cannot be cut more than 25 per cent.

Joe undoubtedly could make that much in radio or television. He has been offered as much as $100,000 a year for a half hour TV show once a week. The difficulty is that if he decided to keep playing and had a couple of world championship teams his first four years in the majors, and a string of 56 consecutive games in which he hit safely.

But the Yankees, who will really miss DiMaggio the player, will also miss Joe the man. He has been a great inspiration, a brilliant player—and always a right guy. What they're rooting for is one more homer to take him out in style.

A PROUD MAN

He also is a proud man, and would not want to face the role of a has-been.

DiMaggio is an enigma. With most fading hall players, it is the legs or the arms which give out first. Most of them are able to hit fairly well as long as they can walk up to the plate.

With DiMaggio, the legs and arms still are fine. But for some reason he can't hit any more. That batting eye which once drilled holes in pitchers has lost its efficiency.

Joe, a second guy, incidentally, isn't ready to make his official announcement.

"This isn't the time nor the place to make any statements," he said, as the Yankees quietly celebrated their triumph over the Giants to go all even at the end of two games. "There's work to be done yet. I've plenty of time before next spring."

Manager Casey Stengel, for one, insists that he would like to see DiMaggio return next season. But Joe, his friends insist, has "had it."

He'll leave behind him a string of records—tying Ruth's mark of playing in 10 World Series; three-time winner of the most valuable player award; first and only man to play on four straight

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE CLASS?

Jimmy Lackie Has A Threat

Some people call Jim Lackie "The Maker of Champions."

Others who don't like a consistent winner are not so complimentary when speaking of Jim and his illustrious sports career. The fact remains, however, that when Lackie takes over the managerial role of any team, that team can be counted upon to finish in the top money.

His softball teams have won three B.C. championships and one western Canada crown and have been in the city playoffs every year. He had a hockey team—Douglas Tire—in the Commercial Hockey League in 1949. The team won the city championship.

Lackie did not have a hockey team last season; he was president of the league. However, this year he is back managing a team and the betting men in the city are putting their money on his Victoria Merchants to be the class of the league.

HAS GOOD MATERIAL

Lackie himself says, "We have very good material and I have complete faith in Bill Jensen our coach. All the players are tickled pink that Jensen will be coaching them. You can't beat a combination like that."

Jensen will play defense as well as coach the club. He played centre for Gladwell Meteors last season.

Returning from last year's Douglas-Tire team are a goal-keeper, three forwards and one defenseman. Ab Ellis the goalie has had one of the best goalies' percentages in the loop over the past two seasons. The three forwards are centres Len Elphick and Doug Grant and wingman Bill Reynolds while the lone defenseman is Al Arnold.

The new players supply the Merchants with a line-up that bulges with power and speed.

McBETH SIGNS

Lackie has succeeded in roping Connie McBeth, speedy high-scoring centre with the championship Fisherman's Coop club last season. It is a known fact that McBeth had substantial offers from every team in the loop this season when it was announced that Co-ops were not entering the league but he has assured Lackie that he will be playing for Merchants.

Cliff Coulter and Archie McLean are two more of last year's stars who have announced their intentions of joining Lackie. Last season Coulter was with Civil Service while McLean played for Navy. McLean is still in the navy but is expecting his discharge within the next week.

Three newcomers to the city will also bolster the Merchants' ranks. Ed Pishko, one of the newcomers who has signed with Lackie has reportedly been approached by National Hockey League scouts in recent years. He is a right-winger.

Signed at the same time as Pishko were Doug Taylor, who played with Flin Flon and Gary Miles from Humboldt, Sask.

GUNTER MAY PLAY

Ken Gunter, who played a lot of centre for Douglas Tire last season, is hoping to secure the job of linesman in the Pacific Coast League this season. However, if he is not accepted he will likely turn out for Merchants.

From the look of this line-up, it seems like Lackie's championship touch is going to give other teams in the 1951-52 Merchants' League a lot of headaches before a winner is declared.

Farm Club Ties Maple Leafs 1-1

NIAGARA FALLS (CP).—Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League tied Pittsburgh Hornets, 1-1, in an exhibition game last night—and were lucky their American League farm club didn't win.

Both scores came in the first period. George Armstrong put the Hornets in front but the Leafs came back fast to tie up the game on a tally by Danny Lewicki.

Porky Cuts Team To 16; Cheer Squad Training

By TED WHAN

After careful study of all Vic High hoop prospects for over a month, coach George "Porky" Andrews has now cut his V.H.S. hoop proteges down to 16. The final cut to 12 will be made within two weeks, after Andrews makes a final screening.

Two or three away games are scheduled for the Totems this month. The first home game is slated for early November.

Adding extra enjoyment to the Totem games again this year will be the colorful V.H.S. majorettes.

Memorial Round Scheduled Monday

The Bunny Thompson Memorial Trophy competition will be played at the Uplands Golf Club Monday. The competition will be an 18-hole medal round.

"MR. BELVEDERE RINGS THE BELL"

Domination: At 1.00, 3.10, 5.20, 7.30, 9.45.
Starring Clifton Webb, with Joanne Dru, Hugh Marlowe.
Take Grandma! "Mr. Belvedere Rings the Bell" is a lovable, improbable story with Clifton Webb sitting prettier than ever. This time he is a slightly plicated lecturer-philanthropist who—in order to prove that a man is only as old as he thinks he is—poses as a man of 77 in an Old Folks' Home.

A whole homeful of warm-hearted, droll-natured characters rallies nimbly around him, and by the end of the picture you'll love the lot of them (even Mrs. Sampler, who hides a bottle of whisky in a hole in a tree and

As Mr. Belvedere himself says, with typical modesty: "I've a very ordinary face, really—it's only my eyes that reveal my amazing intelligence."

The film has some delicious moments. And also some heart-catching ones. Dryest-witted of all the old folks, for instance, is dour Miss Hoadley (Frances Brandt), who just never gets a letter from her folks when all the rest do. Never once does Miss Hoadley become sentimental. But her repeated handling of this little situation is worth this paragraph all by itself.

For all his rarified nonsense, Mr. Belvedere does finally prove, in a scatterbrained sort of way, that age is more a mental condition than a physical one. And the finale is thoroughly cheerful—the kind of ending that will send you into the street all beaming and benevolent.

The sophisticates may be a little patronizing. The intellectuals may sniff it away. But as I said before... take Grandma! Take the family! And (though you may laugh your head off in places), take a handkerchief.

IN HOLLYWOOD

Film Moguls To 'Sell'
Movies Throughout U.S.

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Actors, directors, writers and producers by the dozens today are being dispatched on Hollywood's biggest invasion of the United States.

More than 240 personalities are hitting the road to sell the motion picture industry back to their countrymen.

The campaign, entitled "Movie-time, U.S.A.," kicks off Monday in the 28 biggest American cities.

The appearance tours will extend to smaller centres throughout the week, but Movie-time, U.S.A. will be a year-long campaign to encourage movie attendance.

I predict that the most frequent question the troupers hear will be "What's the lowdown on Tone, Payton and Neal?"

This week the west coast got not only the baseball telecasts direct from New York, but eastern TV entertainment shows as well.

This liberation from the hated kinescope was hailed by critics and public alike.

It is a pleasure to see the better eastern shows and not be subjected to hazy film and uncertain sound. Only fly in the ointment is the timing. Because of the three-hour difference between east and west coast time, most of the good shows appear here from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Cooks and complaining already.

Victorians
Keeping Step
With Progress

"Victoria, as the capital city must and will keep in step with the development of British Columbia's vast potentialities."

That opinion was expressed by city manager Cecil Wyatt when speaking to members of the Victoria Lions Club at a luncheon Friday in the Empress Hotel.

Reviewing his first year in office, the city manager told how negotiations between the city and seven employee unions extended over a period of five months.

He said a healthy relationship had been established with unions dealing with a city manager. It put the bargaining on an employee-to-employee basis.

He thought one of the main improvements in civic administration during the past year was the centralizing of accounting in one department.

"We now know from day to day the city's financial standing," he said.

Ship's Repairs
Delayed; C.P.R.
Not Perturbed

Delay in repairing the Ss. Princess Kathleen, now in government drydock at Esquimalt, is not creating any problem for B.C. Coast Steamship Service.

Capt. O. J. Williams, manager of the steamship line, explained today the ship was not needed for service until next summer. When work on the vessel is completed, she will be tied up in Victoria for the winter months.

Repairs to the ship necessitated by a collision with the C.N.R.'s Prince Rupert on Aug. 30, are being held up because of the current shipyard boilermakers' strike.

Oil Companies'
Officers Train
For Emergencies

Staff representatives from Victoria oil companies will take a civil defense volunteers' course at weekly intervals starting Oct. 11.

Victoria civil defense co-ordinator Leonard Hatcher said today the men will attend classes at 4 each Thursday afternoon for seven weeks. Attendance will be on company time.

Smaller firms are invited to send representatives to take the same course, Hatcher said.

U.S. Canned Goods

WASHINGTON (UP)—Grocery prices of some canned vegetables soon may go up a penny a can.

The Office of Price Stabilization has authorized canners of most vegetables to raise their prices to reflect increased costs. The O.P.S. said that prices at the canner level "generally" will go up.

Puzzling Out Nursery Rhyme

Possibly there's enough of the drawing to enable you to guess what nursery rhyme the artist had in mind when he started drawing it. In any case, you'll want to complete it and see what's missing. To do so, start with a pencil at dot one and draw a continuous line from dot to dot until you reach 48. Where two numbers are beside a single dot, use it twice.

Solution: Three little kittens have lost their mittens.

17	24	1	8	15
23	5	7	14	16
4	6	13	20	22
10	12	19	21	3
11	18	25	2	9

As you confirm by checking it, this is a magic square. That is, all vertical and horizontal and the two diagonal rows of five boxes add to the sum total.

In this case the figure 13 is in the centre box. Another magic square can be constructed from the figures 1 through 25 with the figure one in the centre box. How long will it require you to construct it successfully? Remember, when completed, all vertical and horizontal rows and the two diagonal rows running through the centre must have the same total.

GARAGE PROBLEM

A driver of a large trailer stopped at a garage where he was confronted with the problem of getting his trailer through the doorway. The entrance was one and one quarter inches too low. The driver knew that if he tried to squeeze in, he might wreck either the trailer or the garage.

But, since he was an ingenious fellow, it did not take him long to figure out a solution to his problem. How did he get into the garage?

A small box of fuses and headlight bulbs, kept in the glove compartment of an automobile, often are very useful.

TRICKS AND RIDDLES

How Could The Crooks Do It?

By MAURICE SHAPIRO

Professor Oripahs, criminologist, accompanied Detective O'Malley as they entered the lobby of the apartment house where the latter lived. They stopped for a moment as Detective O'Malley took out his keys to get his mail. The two men then walked to the elevator.

"In gangland, criminals often communicate with each other secretly," said Detective O'Malley. "We know that Adolf Samous and Felix Hermosa, dope peddlers, who live in this building, are communicating with each other within the house. Adolf passes heroin to Felix, and Felix sees to its distribution."

"Adolf lives on the first floor, and Felix lives on the tenth floor. The house has three elevator boys, on eight-hour shifts. These boys have been with the house for 10 years, and I can vouch for their honesty. We had the boys keep an eye on the suspects, and the latter were never seen to meet in the building, or to leave packages anywhere."

"Adolf usually left at 10 a.m., and returned about 4 p.m. Felix left about 11 a.m., and returned about 6 p.m. We have tapped their wires, but they do not telephone each other. Of course, we could have arrested the suspects and have questioned them, but instead we intercepted their messages and copied them, in order to trap the entire gang. The suspects had arranged for daily transmission of packages and messages within the building, without contacting each other, or any other person. How did they do this?"

"The building has no dumbwaiters, has it?"

"No, it has incinerators."

Professor Oripahs laughed. "The answer is fairly obvious," he said.

How did the two suspects communicate with each other within the building? You'll find a clue in the picture above.

TRANSPPOSITIONS

As a test of your vocabulary, see how quickly you can identify the words indicated by the first definitions below, and then effect the desired transpositions of the letters to spell out other words. For example, to transpose joined and separated, you turn "united" into untied.

1. Transpose CAVE and get COWARD.

2. Transpose BRUTAL and get MONEY.

3. Transpose to CONFUSE and get DISPLEASED.

4. Transpose a CHIEF and get a CURRENT.

5. Transpose a LANGUAGE and get an EATING trough.

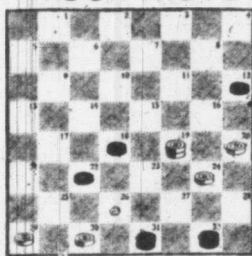

Solution: 1. Coward, 2. Current, 3. Displeased, 4. Current, 5. Eating trough.

RIDDLE

What is it that a gentleman has not, never can have, and yet can give to a lady?

Solution: A husband.

At the Roundabout

Scheduled time for writing this round-up was crashed by distractions more interesting this week.

John Watt, who some years ago used to supply the magazine section with lilting robust Scottish rhymes, dropped in to say goodbye. Former songwriter for Harry Lauder, a keen-witted chap with ever a bright quip, John made a lot of friends during 20 years or more with the government service in Victoria. On his retirement, he is taking his wife to make a home in California, where his son now lives. He left a copy of Bruce Hutchison's "The Unknown Country", to be forwarded on to him after the author has autographed it.

Another distraction, very pleasant, too, Bill Munro, Island Victory Bond organizer, dropped in. Friendly chap, loves people he says, but the hardest man in the world to bleed a story out of when it comes to a personal angle. After hearing his talk about what can be accomplished by systematic saving through savings bonds or other sources, I wished I had met him 20 years ago. Some of what he said is on page 2 next week.

Sixteenth Canadian Scottish were responsible, for the other distraction, also very pleasant, but as a result there is a story on file ready to run. Irish Jack Fogarty, boy soldier of the Boer War, later of San Francisco, who came to Victoria, to join up during World War I, came over from Vancouver for the reunion and Vimy Ridge ceremony. He was thrilled to meet Col. Cy Peck, Gus Lyons and other men of his old battalion. He noted with a twinge of sadness that the passing of time had left its mark on some of the friends of his boisterous days. Sorrowfully he shook his head as he told of the banquet. He had found it wonderful to meet the old gang. To hear him tell of the 16th you had to keep recalling the names of other great battalions, like the 54th, to keep in mind that there were other units besides the famous Scots.

It was tragic to hear him tell of the wonderful spread at the 16th's show, the rum ration, wine, issue of beer and whiskey, shake his head sorrowfully and say "that's not for me anymore, Tom. I traded it all for a crusty roll and a slice of turkey to make a sandwich as I couldn't eat the wonderful supper, either." In spite of drinking toasts from the bottle, which he could not touch himself except to provide hospitality for his friends, I left his company saddened.

Never did I imagine the toll of ulcers could be so terrific.

Cartoonists, writers and comedians in general have had a lot of fun at the expense of mothers-in-law who figure so greatly in the picture in these days of housecrowding. There need be nothing but pleasantness if you follow the rules. There are nine of them in next week's magazine section.

STAMPS

World's Biggest Stamp

Scott's "Specialized U.S." catalogue lists not only postage and revenue stamps, but includes locals, postal stationery, reply coupons and even war saving stamps and Christmas seals.

Yet in spite of this elaborate coverage you will find no mention of a U.S. 2c postage stamp which was issued with full official sanction, and which actually prepaid postage on a letter which was duly delivered to the addressee without extra charge.

The stamp, of which only one specimen exists, was issued about 30 years ago, and belongs to Fred Jarrett of Toronto, who showed it to a small group of our local collectors while on a visit here some years ago. It looks very like any other 2c stamp of the period except for one startling difference—it measures about 9x12 inches!

Jarrett, who is perhaps the best known philatelist in Canada, told us the story of this unique stamp:

One of America's best known manufacturers of typewriters, while considering an exhibit for one of the world fairs which was held in the East during the 20's, decided to do something really spectacular, so they built a giant typewriter, all to scale, which would actually work, although it was as big as a room. It was operated by pretty girls who had to dance on the keys in order to type with it, and the resulting lettering was between one and two inches high. It naturally made quite a sensation while in operation.

At the end of the show an envelope about six feet long was addressed to the local office of the manufacturers, and the post office agreed to deliver it if handed in for mailing. As it would have spoiled the effect if an ordinary stamp had been used, the postmaster was won over to the idea of issuing a gargantuan stamp to suit the envelope. He authorized the printing of this monster, which was made by blowing up an ordinary 2c stamp by photo-lithography. A print was made and stuck on the envelope, which was duly taken down to the post office and mailed. There it was "sorted" and delivered to its destination by two postmen, one at each end!

Jarrett was demonstrating typewriters for the company at that time (he was champion typist for Canada in those days), and when it was all over he got permission to keep the stamp.

Very few collectors, even specialists in the U.S., know of the existence of this odd item, which in the writer's opinion ought to be listed in the catalogues, as it is a real stamp even if it is a philatelic freak!

Target For Taggers

Mayor Garnet Coulter looking back on nine years as chief magistrate, says sweet young things from 16 to 60 almost daily beat a path to his office. They all have the same line: "Oh, Mr. Mayor, it's so good of you to buy a tag."

Usually with the sweet words, and a forced professional smile by the mayor, news cameras click while a square of cardboard is pinned on the mayor's lapel. The little ceremony marks the launching of another tag day.

Mayor Coulter estimates he has been tagged more than 1,000 times since he took office.

BEAUTY SPOT OF PARK PROJECT OF DEPRESSION

By FRANCES EBBES CANAVAN

Proposals for a greater zoo in Beacon Hill Park recall memories of a succession of more or less happy animals and birds which have been sheltered there in captivity or semi-captivity during the last 50 years. For the swans, ducks and geese on Goodacre Lake credit must go to Victoria's Mayor Goodacre, who in 1899 had it constructed as a civic project to give much-needed employment during the industrial depression following the smallpox epidemic.

In the park at that time, for the education and amusement of the children and their elders, were displayed a rather scratch assortment of birds and small animals. Two fine North American eagles occupied the first cage. Perched high above the heads of interested spectators, their keen eyes peered proudly and anxiously out; perhaps they had designs upon the lesser birds in the lake, but lacked the opportunity to confirm these suspicions.

Next to the eagles were two vultures. They were gloomily huddled upon their perch, or if seen at feeding time savagely tearing at the meat that had just been given them. Magpies, canaries, small parakeets two wise old owls and a small brown owl were in other cages.

Two small monkeys and a raccoon, looking like a tiny masked brigand, very solitary and very winsome, were included in the animal population.

A the end of the row of cages there was a clearing for an odd-looking brown bear named "Old Joe." He wore a collar with a long chain which fastened him to a post, giving him a considerable area for freedom. He had a special trick; he would walk in a circumscribed circle, sprinkling biscuits or crumbs as he went. Then he lay down apparently asleep, but furtively watching from the centre of his circle, for the pigeons attracted by the crumbs, so affording him an opportunity to pounce upon them and to add to the variety of his menu.

Behind the cages was a great thicket covering a large area and here the deer roamed in semi-captivity. Once a baby moose was added to their company, for a brief span. Larger though younger than most of the deer, he seemed not to realize his own strength, and despite his pitiful moos of protest, the deer persecuted him accordingly, horning him and pushing him about until his awkward and ungainly little life was ended.

Many people will remember the era of the buffalo—Albert, Alberta and their little one, and the family tragedy of the cruel father having killed their offspring, and the subsequent departure of Albert and Alberta to Wainwright Park, there to mingle with their own.

A solitary small seal was at one time kept in a portion of the lake (of the fountain), wired off beyond a small bridge. To the right of Lovers' Lane, that lovely drive which leads out of the park at the corner of Dallas Road and Cook Street, there has always been a deeply wooded tract, and in this wood there lived at one time three bears. The bear pit in which they lived was abandoned long ago.

EYE ON BRITAIN

Mr. Brown—Two Dukes

"May we use your telephone a moment, please? Our car has broken down."

It was 11 p.m. Mrs. Brown had gone to bed. Also the servants. And Mr. Brown, about to go to bed himself, had answered the doorbell and found two young men standing in the rain.

"Certainly, certainly. Come right in."

Leading the way to the telephone at the back of the house, it occurred to him that they might like a cup of tea, and that he would rather like one himself, too.

"Would you join me for a cup of tea? Perhaps a cake or two?"

"Oh, no, we mustn't trouble you at all. Just the telephone."

But Mr. Brown sensed that they could stand a little nourishment. He went straight to the kitchen, put the kettle on the stove and opened the refrigerator.

Twenty minutes later the three had consumed a light supper and were feeling quite congenial. The young men were very pleasant and well-mannered.

Their car had engine trouble. It was a matter of calling a garage and having it repaired before proceeding to London.

"I tell you, what," said Mr. Brown, "I'll have my chauffeur drive you up. You can leave your car here for the night."

Stephen Schofield

"Oh, no, you mustn't be so kind. We can't."

"Frith won't mind. He'll have you home in an hour. I'll get him now. You wait here."

Mr. Brown awakened Frith, told him to get dressed and to drive the men to London. He did so. Towards 1 o'clock they rolled along Kensington Road, one of the men directing Frith:

"... Now just bear right along here, and turn right... yes... right in here."

Frith did as he was told. A moment later the sentry on duty at Buckingham Palace peered into the back of the car, then waved it on inside. It transpired that the young men were the late Duke of Kent and the Duke of York (now King George VI).

Some days later a Daimler limousine drew up at the home of Mr. Brown, about 45 miles south of London. The Duke of Kent was ushered in to see Mr. and Mrs. Brown.

The duke stood in the doorway, bowed formally, and said, "My mother, the Queen, has asked me to convey grateful thanks for your kindness extended to my brother and me the other evening."

Then he smiled, relaxed, and added, "I'm glad that's over. Now how are you?" And he sat down and enjoyed a drink with them before leaving.

Afterwards Mrs. Brown asked her husband why he had not told her, why he had not awakened her up to receive the two dukes, late as it was, that night?

"I didn't know," he said, "I had no idea who they were."

PENNANT PILOTS

Manager's First Thought Is Best—O'Neill; Don't Hesitate To Yank Wavering Pitcher

Another of series of dispatches by managers of leading major league clubs.

By STEVE O'NEILL

Red Sox Manager

A manager must know his men and not be afraid of hurting the feelings of any of them in making the right move.

A manager either has an idea or he hasn't. A manager can't sit around debating what he should do. He hasn't time to take a vote on whether to punt or hit with men on first and second and none out late in a close game, for example. He must instantly decide whether to sacrifice or shoot for the works, win right here or else.

He will almost invariably find the first thought the best, and must not second guess himself if the manoeuvre fails.

Successful managers know when to take the pitcher out, and are not qualmish about it. Bill Terry used to say to a wavering Giant pitcher, "You'd better get out of here before someone gets killed."

A manager should not permit a staggering pitcher to talk him out of taking him out. If he does he will frequently find himself looking the barn door after the horse has been stolen.

The pitchers of today have to be lifted much more regularly than they used to.

Indeed, a pitcher pitching a complete game has come to be unusual. There are numerous reasons for this. The ball is livelier.

Most hitters grip the bat at its end and go for distance. There were more choke hitters in the old days.

Outfielders consequently have to play deep, so many a hit drops between them and the infielders.

Steve O'Neill doesn't hesitate to shout his orders.

The distance to the stands and fences is shorter.

There are altogether too many short-duration pitchers today. Too many weaken after five or six innings, lose control with their stuff.

275-Pounder, Record Sailfish

A world record sailfish—a 275-pound 114½-inch denizen—was boated by Al Steinbaum, San Diego hotel owner.

The intrepid angler, trolling off La Paz, Mex., in a party of three aboard the 28-foot cruiser, Dorando, took the monster on medium tackle.

Al Steinbaum caught his record sailfish, 114½ inches in length, off La Paz, Mex. (NEA)

Using flying fish as bait, Steinbaum worked his tackle about 15 minutes before receiving his strike. The sailfish was brought to gaff 20 minutes later after a hair-raising struggle. Its girth measured 37½ inches.

The fish is 54 pounds heavier than the previous all-tackle world record of 221 pounds, caught in 1947 in the Pacific at the Santa Cruz Islands in the Galapagos.

Steinbaum will file papers with the International Game Fish Association to establish the record catch.

SPORT SHORTS

Maybe you've heard people kick that ball games and other sports events consume too much time these days.

You should have been around when sulky races were decided by the best three of five heats.

In 1891, a race at Independence, Ia., consumed two days and 12 heats. Officials called a recess after three horses each won two successive heats. The next day three different horses won the seventh, eighth and ninth heats. A seventh horse won the next three and top money.

In 1893, the World's Fair Free-for-All Trot was held at old Washington Park, Chicago, for a $15,000 purse. Nine heats were needed, three a day.

Alcoholics...

was an alcoholic if I admitted that I was powerless over alcohol and that my life had become unmanageable. This I admitted frankly and honestly. What a load to get rid of. There was the sum and substance of all my trouble. I was an alcoholic. I found out I could never be a social drinker if I lived to be 100. I was only one drink away from a binge. As long as I did not take that first drink everything was all right. For the first few moments those men talked to me, I frankly could not visualize a life or living without alcohol, but when they asked me if I could possibly get by without a drink tomorrow I said yes, I can do that. So on that basis I started taking one day at a time only.

FORGET WASTED YESTERDAYS

These men told me I would have to forget all of the wasted yesterday, there wasn't anything I could do today which would change anything I did yesterday. It was dead, so why worry about it? Tomorrow was not here yet, I had no stake in tomorrow until I saw tomorrow's sun rise and shine. So the awful uncertainty of tomorrow and the wasted opportunities of yesterday and last week and the remorse of last month were what drove alcoholics mad. Live only 24 hours at a time. Have faith in the A.A. "way of life." As you progress you will meet many more like ourselves who have had similar problems, and many more infinitely worse than yours.

You can imagine how I felt. For the first time in my life I was talking to someone who understood me, someone who had been there too. This was it as far as I was concerned. I took it on faith. For the first time I found I had many friends, more friends than I had ever had in my life before, real honest-to-goodness friends. I was part of this cement which binds us, of having shared in a common peril.

As I progressed, as the fog cleared in my mind, I came to believe that a power greater than myself was restoring my sanity. There was certainly something beginning to take form and substance in my life. Of that I was sure. What a glorious feeling to reach the point where it was a thrill to wake up in the morning, to walk down the street and if you met someone you owed money to, walk right up and acknowledge your debt. No longer did I have to walk down back roads or sink down back alleys. My whole life was before me. I fully realized that I must have been spared for a purpose. There was some reason for having found my way into this wonderful fellowship.

WONDERFUL FELLOWSHIP

A man or woman coming into A.A. is bowled over by the wonderful fellowship that exists in any group of ex-drunks.

We in Victoria are no different from groups in other centres. Our striving for contentment, peace of mind and serenity is the same all over the land.

We have a basic individual 12-step program of recovery.

How we interpret that program is our own choice, as there are no musts. We only are required to be honest with ourselves, sincere in our desire for recovery, and an underlying humility at all times.

It is a long time since I had my last drink. By living one day at a time I have come a long way in my own recovery program. As long as I never lose sight of the fact that I am only one drink away from a binge I shall never experience trouble. Life for me is wonderful. Life today for me is a perpetual challenge. I shudder when I think of the hell it used to be. I hope that I will never return to my former way of living.

LOGGING CAMP JOBS

Greenhorns Provide Fair Game For Jokers

(Third of a series of articles written for the Victoria Sunday Times Magazine by staff writer Don Ingham.)

By DON INGHAM

Every trade has its practical jokes, and the logging is no exception—loggers being what they are.

Greenhorns are fair game, and usually get the business.

The phony errand is the most popular, and almost every logger in the woods today can list the times he was sent all over the claim to look for a choker stretcher, a sky hook, or a left-handed peavey.

Sometimes, however, a greenhorn is just too dumb to fool. Once the writer was ordered to pick up a "water stretcher." A search revealed no water stretcher, so I asked the boss. He was caught too suddenly to dream up a good answer, and gave me a rubber diaphragm out of an air-brake booster.

IT BOUNCED

When it was turned over to the original joker and told it came from the boss, what could he do but take it? That finished the jokes for a long time.

Once a bright hooktender had a green but eager choker whom he sent off to camp for a sky hook. As the lad was running around camp the super, a case-hardened old-timer, said, "Why aren't you at work?"

"I'm looking for a sky hook," the greenie answered.

"And who sent you for the sky hook?" asked the push with an ominous crackle in his voice.

"Joe Doakes, the hooker," the lad said innocently.

"Get back to the woods," growled the super, and that night Joe Doakes was heading down the road with his pack and pay cheque.

Sometimes the gags backfire.

NO LUNCH THAT DAY

Hooktenders are in a happy position for one of the snappiest gags in the business. By taking a strand of cable of just the right size and wrapping it round and round in a circle around a lunch kit, it makes a "molly hogan" that just fits the lunch box. It takes about half an hour to unwrap by hand, and when it is passed through the handle of the box, it means someone goes without lunch that day.

Hookers can get away with a gag like that because on an easy yarding show all they do is sit on a stump all day long, and anyway, he runs the side and who wants to start a fight with the boss?

WHO THOUGHT OF THAT ONE?

Another nifty with the standard thermos kit is to take a pair of pliers and turn about one-sixteenth of an inch of the little projections that fit the latches at right angles. It's very easy to close the box, but the average man will take an axe to his bucket before he figures out the gimmick.

Another one is to bet some chap he can't hit the top of a stump nine times in a row with an axe when his eyes are closed.

Just before he starts somebody volunteers to hold his hat.

You guessed it.

After the first swipe with the axe the hat is carefully laid on the stump. Then everybody runs.

Sikhs And Hindus Greet Mystic From Homeland

By N. DE BERTRAND LUGRIN,
Author of Pioneer Women of Vancouver Island

RABINDRANATH TAGORE

It was twenty-two years after the first pitiable contingent of Sikhs arrived that I attended the Triennial Conference of the National Council of Education, which was opened by His Excellency Lord Willingdon at the Parliament Buildings here in April, 1929. In this connection two completely contrasting pictures stood out in my memory which I shall never forget.

The first was the reception of the delegates from overseas, who, with the local delegates made up an assembly of nearly one thousand.

Standing on the crimson carpet in front of the Speaker's dais were His Excellency and Lady Willingdon, Lieutenant-Governor Bruce and Miss Mackenzie, the Premier of British Columbia and Mrs. Tolmie, their aides and secretaries behind them.

The guard of honor was made up of men from the Canadian Scottish in their scarlet tunics. All about the galleries were hung flags and pennants.

On that same morning, the Empress of Asia steamed majestically in from Quarantine and docked at the Outer Wharves of Victoria.

Long before the time of her arrival, by twos and threes and in small groups, a stream of Sikhs and Hindus had come through the town and down to the seafloor to assemble in patiently waiting lines and await the sight of their beloved prince and poet. Today was to see the arrival of Rabindranath Tagore, the Indian sage and mystic, loved and revered throughout the length and breadth of India, admired and respected by the whole civilized world.

STRIKING CONTRAST

From the pitiful handful of shivering Sikhs who had come here twenty-two years before, the Hindu colony had grown to many hundreds, and had become established and prosperous. There they stood, most of them turbaned, bright of eye, their women with their hair and their children, the women with silk handkerchiefs tied over their black hair, the boys in headgear like their fathers. Three or four of the leading Sikhs carried large floral garlands, hyacinths, daffodils and lilies interwoven with green.

When the boat docked there presently appeared coming down the gangplank, a slim, tall figure in a long grey robe. Bare-headed, his hair shone like silver; his beard was almost as white. He stood still at the sight of his waiting people and smiled, his whole face alight.

Instantly every Hindu and Sikh waiting there on the dock, in very orderly ranks, raised their right arms in salute and the welcome, "Namascar, Namascar," was echoed along the line as the poet descended and passed through the columns. He let them place the garlands about his neck. But none among them, except those few leaders, ventured to step out of line. Their attitude was wholly reverent. Save for the repeated "Namascar," there was no sound among them until he had passed by.

These are two of the most vivid pictures of the conference, but there is another memorable one in which Tagore is the chief figure. It was seen only by those in the theatre at Victoria, and was not planned especially as a background for him, but could not have been more happily arranged. The large stage was hung with black, and all across the front just behind the footlights was a close row of Madonna lilies. It sounds a bit funeral, but it was not, because against the black background, two Japanese plum trees, ten feet high, transported bodily in the full blush of their spring bloom, had been placed. Between these two groups of blossoms, Tagore stood in his full, red robes and intoned his message.

SAINT AND MYSTIC

But Tagore was a saint and a mystic and probably there were many in the vast audience who did not get all the meaning of what he said. He read from his notes exactly as he had written them, and he remained from first to last above and aloof from his listeners. Those of us who have his books of poems know how hard it is sometimes to interpret them. But he was friendly, many of us met and shook hands with him, and were given an audience in his special suite of rooms, when we went to Vancouver, and called on him at the hotel. Here he was guarded by a coterie of hand-some Sikhs, and also his loved friend, Doctor Andrews. When I went to see him, Mrs. Roper Hamilton was painting his portrait. He had a bad cold and did not want to talk, but he did give me a message to the youth of Canada.

"Be yourselves," he said, "all you young Canadians. Represent your own inner spirit. Come out of the unreal into the real, which each one of us can interpret for himself."

'REVOLUTION' IN V.I.—No. 1

The Men Who Keep The Wheels Turning

By CECIL MAIDEN

While Victoria has been trailing her old English petticoats so delicately over the launds, a revolution has been going on in Vancouver Island.

Men and women in increasing numbers have been starting to make things, and starting to get things done—believing not only in this island's future but backing their faith with hard cash and hard work. Big capital from outside is coming here too—but smaller, local money is playing its part in the big change.

So without losing one iota of the beauty or effacing one page of the history, here is the story of the revolution in V.I.

It's a new story. For the most part it's a story about young people. And it's about new ideas—new ideas in everything from soap to nuts.

You can't have even a commercial revolution without having ringleaders. Usually they're men who not only have the courage of their own convictions, but the courage of everybody else's convictions too. So for that reason they're apt to be young, energetic, and aggressive. They have, moreover, to resist not only the dire predictions of the Old Guard in their own field of activity, but also, in this part of the world, the militant apathy of thousands of gentry hell bent on fading gracefully away.

Let's start with a close-up of two young men who are energetically spearheading the advance as far as the furniture industry is concerned. At a time when many furniture makers are having to shut their doors or retire from a field made unprofitable by labor and other troubles, these two have their hands so full that they are now expanding into the only sizeable plant in Canada making contemporary furniture. (And more about that word "contemporary" in a moment.)

Senior of the two in point of time, but still only 29, is a dark-haired, clear-eyed craftsman called Earl Morrison. He's built like a quarterback, but he has a quiet, contemplative sort of voice that goes with his designs. And that says a lot, for there's a delicacy of precision in his drawing that begins to explain why so much of this particular kind of furniture is wanted, and why Victoria is becoming the centre of a new-style industry that is beginning to ship fine furniture south to California as well as east to the prairies.

The other partner is Robin Bush. He's about the same age, and he shares the same precision in design. He's slimmer to look at and crisper to listen to. But you get the idea that they're both more or less interchangeable in office and function.

Their revolt against the commonplace in furniture seems to have begun somewhere in the mind of young Morrison when he was working on plywood aircraft construction for Howard Hughes down in California. (And that was just before the war snatched him up into the R.C.A.F.)

He had always been intrigued by the mysteries of balance, and he had an affinity for wood. Since he has always liked people it was not unnatural that he should think of balance and wood and people all in the same thought. Or people balanced in wood, if you like. In other words, furniture.

But not "just any furniture." The kind of furniture he pictured was the kind that would go with modern architecture. He thought of chairs and tables, and chests, and upholstered pieces that would have the informal ease of today's living in them. Light, cheerful, impromptu sort of furniture that would still be sturdy enough and fine enough to stand the test of time. Easy chairs, for instance, that would be thrice easy—easy to sit in, easy to look at, easy to move. And for good measure you can add easy to keep clean.

In California, where people carry the lightness and brightness of the southern sunshine into their houses, Earl Morrison had plenty for his restless thought to feed on. And what he saw grew in his mind until, when the war was over and the R.C.A.F. was through with him, he betook himself to Esquimalt and hired a shed in which to design and build with his own hands the furniture of the new age.

That sounds a bit ambitious. And at first there wasn't much more than ambition to show for it. The roof leaked so badly that Morrison and the other few ex-servicemen who rallied around him had to punch holes in the floor to let the water run out. Then the floor itself came up, and the young company could be said to be well and truly floated.

But thoughts about people, and balance, and wood, still went ticking busily away in Earl Morrison's head, and as they ticked into paper, and then into light oak and metal and fabric . . . Canada's architects began to look, and having looked, began to wonder.

Could it be, they asked themselves, that on Vancouver Island—old-world, past-tense Vancouver Island—something new could be brewing?

The answer came in the shape of work. Just a few small commissions to begin with, then more, then a steady stream of work . . . the kind of chairs, tables, bedroom sets, office sets . . . furniture for hotels, for clubs, for restaurants, that was a breakthrough from all the furniture being made in the rest of Canada.

I asked Robin Bush about his trade in the island itself. I asked him how, amid so much conservatism, he found it possible to find customers on his own threshold.

"It's the young people," he said, "mostly the 'young marrieds.' And there are more of them here than you'd imagine. They're modern-minded. They have good taste, and they know what they want."

Circulating across the 10 provinces, however, has been a misconception that "going modern" (and few more unpleasant phrases exist in modern English) is apt to mean going broke. So Morrison and Bush pretty soon discovered that they not only had to disprove the prophecies of the die-hards. They had to fly in the teeth of rumor too.

So they opened an uptown showroom, smartly designed—dramatically balanced as to shape and color and general set-up. And what appeared in the showroom began a little later to appear in the homes. For despite a lot of sideways glances, Vancouver Islanders began to realize what much of the rest of Canada was already realizing, that "going modern" needn't make such inroads into the bank account after all.

And young Earl Morrison had another trick up his sleeve. (A bad simile that, I'm afraid—for he works mostly with his coat off and is hard to picture in a sleeve anyway.) He brought out his line of furniture as "open stock." The designs would be permanently ready and waiting. In other words, a bride and groom could start off, shall we say, with a coffee table—and later build up a whole roomful of furniture in the same design. This meant something that the "young marrieds" had been looking for in vain. It meant the orderly, progressive completing of beautiful homes, in the easy, modern manner . . . as the years rolled by. Just like adding a teacup to replace a broken one or ordering some extra plates in a much-liked pattern.

Speaking of family atmosphere, the first man to join Earl Morrison is still with him. The staff changes are not staff leavings but additions. And by now the crew of energetic and imaginative furniture makers is beginning to take on the cosmopolitan atmosphere of big business . . . with men of many national backgrounds, including an interesting Hungarian, and a young Dane whose English is still limited to "yes" and "no," but who is learning fast and thriving in the enthusiasm that marks the whole bunch of them.

That enthusiasm is now about to spill over into something bigger. For Earl and Robin (so many people call them Earl and Robin that it's hard to keep on saying "Morrison and Bush") are now ready, after a good deal of personal traveling, some good scouting and a close scrutiny of what's happening south of the border, to embrace some new plastic techniques that will give their original designs more fluidity and even greater beauty. These new techniques will permit some altogether different, anatomically-minded chairbacks and seats. Balance, wood and more people again. And more and more people all the time!

This is happening on Vancouver Island—and it's happening now.

But the revolution that is going on doesn't end there. There are others who are young in body and mind who are banded together in the forward drive. The words "Chamber of Commerce" are apt, in Vancouver Island, to take on an altogether misleading pomp and circumstance. They needn't. Victoria's Junior Chamber is full of people like Earl Morrison and Robin Bush. They are going to tell the world what's going on here. And I fancy that the world—or at least a part of it—is in for a surprise.

Earl Morrison, Robin Bush study a blueprint.

Books And Authors

By A. M. THOMAS

Pity the poor historian. He must exercise his imagination but keep it in check; he must stick to facts but, where they are hidden, must use powers of deduction to produce them or a reasonable hypothesis; finally to achieve a measure of success attainable with half the labor devoted to any other form of literary endeavor, he must demonstrate that everyone says but few believe, that truth is not only stranger but far more interesting than fiction.

All this is inspired by a reading of a book reviewed elsewhere in this section, Thomas B. Costain's "Magnificent Century."

Most histories append a lengthy bibliography but Mr. Costain, doubtless sighing as he did so, looked over his list of references and said:

"So much reading was required in the preparation of this book that a complete list of sources would be unnecessarily long."

Instead, he acknowledges the standard works in general and then catalogues a scant 27 books he describes as having been particularly useful.

They range, chronologically, from a History of the Tower of London by John Bailey, 1821, to John Harvey's Gothic England, published in New York in 1947.

From this list there is no indication as to how far down into original or even remotely contemporaneous sources Mr. Costain dug, but if he so much as turned the surface he has our deep sympathy.

We get an inkling of the troubles of historians when, in reading the Magnificent Century (England's thirteenth) we referred to W. H. Auden's monumental anthology of English poetry, published last year.

Early in its first volume are some anonymous lyrics of that same thirteenth century and their language will demonstrate that the historian who conscientiously derives his work from the original sources has what the boys in the pool room would call "no lead pipe cink."

One of them, confusingly entitled "Now Sprinkles the Spray" goes like this:

Son ich herde that mirye note
Thider I drogh.
Under a bogh
I fonde hire in an herber swot
With joye enogh.
Son I asked "thou mirye may Why sinkestou ay?"

The question mark put there 700 years ago precisely expresses our feelings which in turn measure our appreciation of and sympathy with all historians.

Others apparently better to our sympathy are U.S. booksellers who, according to a recent news digest are taking something of a beating. We have no direct information as to their Canadian brothers, but most economic ills that visit our neighbors seem to cross the border sooner or later.

In the U.S., anyway, 70 of the 2,800 book stores have closed their doors since early in 1950 and 350 others are reported in more or less dire straits.

Not that business is falling off. More books are being sold than ever before but overhead has been out-climbing income.

Emphasizes Achievements Of Outstanding Canadians

REVIEWED BY PHIL LEE

"The Book of Canadian Achievement," by Helen Palk, J. M. Dent & Sons (Canada) Limited, pp 306. Price: $3.75.

The late Helen Palk was a Winnipeg educationist, but, more important, she was a Canadian in thought and deed. Her deeds found outlet in such books on Canadians as "Page From Canada's Story," "Page From Canada's Geography," etc. Her thoughts found culmination in her last work, "The Book of Canadian Achievement."

Written simply and candidly for the minds of the younger set, Helen Palk's book is a "must" for all who would learn of Canada's cultural greatness, past or present. It should be read especially by those who travel abroad and leave persons from other countries amazed at the lack of interest and knowledge displayed by Canadians about their own nation.

In writing of her country Miss Palk found much to brag about, in a gentle, modest way. In doing so her pen banished provincial boundary lines and appears equally at home in Halifax as in Victoria. For hers is a book on Canada and Canadians.

The "Book of Canadian Achievement" treats forthrightly and capably with a gamut that ranges easily from Louis Hebert, Canada's first farmer, to piky-faced Barbara Ann Scott, admittedly the finest women's competitive figure skater of all time.

Many of her biographies and sketches, such as those covering such well-known names as cameraman Yusuf Karsh, Olympic runner Percy Williams, musician Sir Ernest MacMillan, gather interest in the telling. But Helen Palk's book gets in its best blackboard exercises when it deals with forgotten or never-known cultural figures of the past.

For instance, how many Canadians know that it was a young Nova Scotian, Douglas McCurdy, who took to the air aboard a flimsy biplane, the Silver Dart, to make the first flight in the British Empire? Place: Baddeck Bay, Cape Breton Island. Time: February 22, 1909.

Although most Canadians know that the great American inventor, Alexander Graham Bell, disclosed his wonder invention, the telephone, near Brantford, Ont., how many of us can recall the wonders performed on behalf of humanity by Sir William Osler, Frederick Banting and Dr. Best?

How many Canadians find pride

Costain Presents English History In Fascinating Form

"The Magnificent Century," by Thomas B. Costain, Doubleday, 384 pages, $4.50.

If he accomplished nothing else, Thomas Costain has done the reading public a great service in demonstrating that history without the garnishings of fiction can be the most fascinating of all subjects.

T. B. COSTAIN

"The Magnificent Century" is the second book in a series he is writing under the general title, "The Pageant of England," and carries on where the first volume, "The Conquerors," left off, i.e., with the death of the despot King John and the coronation of his son, Henry, at the age of nine.

This was the century and England was the place in which all the freedoms for which democracy is now arming feverishly to preserve were born.

Magna Carta had been signed but the battle to sustain and enforce it had been joined.

Knowledge in embryo was kicking in the womb of men's minds and Englishmen were coming home from the Crusades with food for its infancy—foreign books and medicines, new geographies, new foods and thoughts that might be counted heresies but that added to the sum of learning.

It was a century of great heroes. Among them Simon de Montfort, Robert Grosseteste, Duns Scotus and Roger Bacon—all of them sustained by a great religious fervor and a faith in their temporal future that was to be matched centuries later by the pioneers of this continent.

Costain has used all his great powers as a story-teller in clothing the skeletal facts of these inspiring persons and events in prose as dramatic and vivid as the pageantry with which the period is associated.

No mention is made in this volume as to a successor in Mr. Costain's "Pageant of England," but there will be much disappointment if one is not forthcoming.—A.M.T.

Fur-Lined Suits Offer Versatility

The woman who wants to make a sound clothes investment for autumn will take more than one look at the suit with a fur-lined, reversible short coat.

She will get, for her money, double wear from the coat. Fur on one side, wool on the other means a coat that is twice as useful. And she will also get a suit that is itself a complete costume, to be worn as such. But further, she'll have the skirt for wear with sweaters, with blouses, with odd jackets.

Handsome tweed in red and grey, given wide cuffs and reversible lining of grey muskrat, makes a suit (left) that could be a mainstay all through fall and winter. Designed by Seymour Fox, it has wide revers and a fullness that permits deep wrapping. Shoulders are smoothly rounded, lines are sound good taste. A straight skirt in red has a single pleat at front centre to allow for walking comfort.

The wrap coat appears again (right) in a suit of wine fleece by this same designer. Here, the lining is black broadtail. There's an edging of the fur for this reversible coat. Cuffs are wide and notched. A front centre pleat appears again in the smooth, straight skirt.

Author Preferred Poetry But Wrote Cookery Book

The Victorian age is not remembered for its husband and wife teams. Women did help their husbands, but usually, like Mary Anne Disraeli, remained in the background. An exception to the rule were the "Beetons"—Samuel and Isabella. He was an outstanding publisher of his day and she famous for her Mrs. Beeton's Cookery Book.

The Cookery Book was not a new idea. Twenty years before, Eliza Acton had called on Longmans and offered them some poetry. "My dear Madam," said Thomas Longman, "it is no good bringing me poetry; nobody wants poetry now. Bring me a cookery book, and we might come to terms."

The rest is history. She brought a cookery book, they came to terms. The venture was so successful that Longman could afford to publish the verses of Miss Acton "to please her." Mrs. Beeton's book was a much larger project. It appeared in instalments, proving popular from the first, and the authoress drew much of her material from France and Germany, for she was conversant with conditions there.

Nor did she deal only with cooking. She discussed manners, morals, drinking, social habits of all kinds. Her work was criticized as being extravagant and being out of touch with the lower middle classes. This was untrue, however, as she specialized in the cheap soups, used on the continent at the time—cabbage soup, bread soup and the like. "The secret of Soup a la Solferino," writes H. Montgomery Hyde in his Mr. and Mrs. Beeton (published by Harrap), "which still appears on menus, was communicated to Mrs. Beeton by an English newspaper correspondent who was present at the Battle of Solferino in 1859, during the struggle for Italian independence, and who was invited by some of Emmanuel's troops, on the day before the battle, to partake of a portion of their potage."

What's Right?

Friends of yours buy a house and are interested in what they paid for it.

Wrong—Feel free to ask them point-blank how much the house cost.

Right—Realize that if they want you to know what they paid for the house they'll tell you.

You try to make conversation with a child who is very shy.

Wrong—Ask him a lot of questions.

Right—Talk along until you gain his interest and he wants to talk because he has something to add to the conversation.

You dial the wrong number when you are telephoning.

Wrong—Hang up, without any apology.

Right—Say: "I'm sorry, I must have the wrong number."

You wonder how old a newly made acquaintance is.

Wrong: Ask her how old she is.

Right: Don't ask personal questions. If she doesn't mind telling her age, she'll probably mention it of her own accord some day.

You drop in to visit with a friend and see that she is very busy.

Wrong: Say: "You go right ahead with your work, and I'll sit and talk to you."

Right: Stay a few minutes and then leave.

Households Hints

An ice cube is a handy aid for redampening dried-out spots when freshly-laundried clothes fail to smooth out evenly at ironing time. Simply rub the cube lightly over the too-dry areas, taking care to moisten, not saturate, the spot.

To fit a candle snugly into its holder, try this trick. Light a kitchen match and carefully hold the flame to the wrong end of the taper, moving it about until the entire base of the candle is soft and drippy. Then extinguish the match and quickly press the candle into the candlestick. Be sure to arrange it in a perfectly upright position before the wax hardens.

An old mirror need not be thrown away simply because of one or more small bare spots. Cover the spot on the back of the mirror with tin foil, applying fresh shellac to hold the foil securely in place.

If your dish towels and table linens are beginning to look dingy and yellow despite your best laundry efforts, try this trick for whitening them. Wet them thoroughly, rub them well with soap, and hang them in the bright sunlight to bleach. When the pieces are dry, wash them as you usually do, by machine or hand, remembering to rinse extra well to remove excess soap.

Here's a trick for removing mildew spots from linens. Begin by dampening the mildewed areas with clear water. Next, rub on a thick coating of a pasty mixture you have prepared from castile soap and scraped chalk. Rub this cleaner well into the spots with your fingertips until the mildew is gone; then rinse well with clean water.

RECIPES

Experts Tell Housewives How To Stretch Meat

A few years ago, when rationing was strictly in force, most Canadian housewives learned how to stretch meat. Today they can put those well-learned lessons to good use again. Although meat is not rationed, every pound has to be stretched as far as possible because it is a costly item. The home economists of the consumer section, Canada Department of Agriculture, know that it is very difficult to plan meals without meat and so they feel that Mrs. Homemaker should put forth a special effort to make the most of the meat which her budget allows her.

They say that one of the most important points in making the most of meat is to know how to buy meat, that is, to know the various cuts and grades of meat. They suggest that for the homemaker who does not know the cuts of meat she should write to the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and ask for the free meat charts which show the retail cuts of pork, beef and lamb. Often the cuts of meat which are not so well known and consequently not so much in demand, are excellent buys. Every homemaker should start now to try to become acquainted with all the cuts of meat, not just the few which she is accustomed to buying. Any cut, when properly prepared and served, may be flavorful and attractive.

RECOGNIZE CUT, QUALITY

Beef is the only meat that is sold by grade and the red and blue ribbon-like government grade marks are a guarantee of high quality. However, today there is a considerable quantity of C and D grade beef on the retail market and these grades of beef are not marked with ribbon-like brands. Thus, if the meat has neither the red nor the blue brand marks, then it is grade C or D quality. This applies in all centres in Canada except British Columbia, where C and D quality beef is identified under provincial legislation with a stamp in brown coloring. All of these grades of beef, if properly prepared, will give good eating satisfaction. The important thing is to recognize the cut and the quality which has been bought and to cook it properly.

In order to get as many servings as possible from meat it must be cooked properly. It should never be cooked too quickly regardless of the kind or cut, for quick cooking shrivels the meat and tends to cause shrinkage.

There are many types of meat extenders which when used will give more meat servings. Meat is different from other foods in that it needs little added flavor. By combining it with other foods, however, it may be given added zest to say nothing of adding food value. Tomatoes, onions, celery and parsley, etc., all add flavor and food value. Perhaps it may be stated that vegetables are one of the most common meat extenders. Such savory dishes as stews, boiled dinners, ragouts and meat pies might be made by adding almost any combination of vegetables to meat. If dumplings are added, additional servings will be gained.

Meat may also be combined with the pastes, that is noodles, spaghetti or macaroni. Spaghetti with meat balls is of course a favorite in many families, but when served with diced liver and tomato sauce is just as flavorful and colorful.

Plenty To Do In Garden These Early Fall Days

By HENRY FREE

There's plenty to keep us busy outside these early fall days. Just to sit down and go over the list is enough to give one a slight back-ache.

Despite the advice of well-meaning neighbors the asparagus tops should be left standing until after seeds ripen so as to give the roots a chance to store up growing vitamins for next year's crops. Other than spraying with calcium arsenate to catch any left-over beetles there is nothing to do until the tops brown. Then remove them by cutting at the ground line.

Unused rows in the vegetable garden should be fertilized lightly and spaded, raked and sown to some cover crop like Rosen's rye, winter vetch, or buckwheat. A cover crop benefits the garden in many ways, chiefly because it prevents the loss of surface and plant food and adds humus to the soil as it decays after being turned under in spring as soon as the soil is diggable.

Lack of rain has brought many birds to our ever-filled bird bath. The wise gardener keeps the bath well supplied with water, especially if a drought comes.

Plans for autumn planting are being made to insure a good selection of a few choice shade-enduring evergreens.

Our back yard is much too shady for both perennials and annuals and in their place we will plant mountain laurel, leucothoe, Carolina rhododendron, azaleas and Oregon holly grape. These evergreens will bloom before the two large maples are in full leaf. Specie tulips, narcissus, winter aconite and scillas will supply the color in early spring.

Narcissus plantings that have been blooming poorly because of overcrowding should be dug up, the bulbs sorted and the best of them replanted in an enriched soil. A fertilizer strong in phosphorus and plenty of peat moss or woods earth should be well mixed with the soil. The bulbs should bloom normally next spring.

The final trimming of hedges and clipping of evergreens that have been kept to a form should be undertaken this week-end. It is just as necessary to prune roses, clematis, wisteria and other vines as it is trees and shrubs. All old, ungainly and unproductive canes should be removed. This will give more room for the young and more vigorous shoots.

After observing an unkempt flower border the old gardener remarked to the garden club, "don't let your flower garden run down just because it is hot and dry. Cut out all the dead flowering stalks, keep the soil stirred and weeds removed and the edges trim—and water if possible."

Indian Summer Fine For House Painting

Indian summer is a fine time to relax—and it's also a fine time to do outdoor painting too, right on into October.

You can save yourself a lot of money painting your own house, providing you're not foolhardy (or allergic) about climbing ladders—and providing, also, that you don't get overambitious and try to do the whole job in a couple of week-ends.

Begin by visiting your paint dealer and getting him to help you work out, by figuring square feet, amount of trim, and number of coats how much paint you'll need for the job.

You'll need proper brushes, too. If you haven't much of an assortment in your workshop. If you lack ladders they can be rented in lots of communities; or they can be borrowed, of course, depending on how you stand with your neighbors.

Your paint dealer also will help you decide the best kind of paint for the climate you live in, such as whether to use a freely-chalking paint that is more of less self-cleaning as it weathers, or a harder finish. Don't fool around with unknown bargain paints.

If just brushing on the paint were the only thing involved in this job, a lot more people probably would do it themselves. But you'll run into all kinds of trouble unless you do a lot of preliminary work first.

Places where the old paint has peeled, cracked, blistered or checked will have to be scraped down to bare wood and primed. You'll usually find the worst of these spots around the eaves and the door and window trim, which means you have to take down screens and shutters before you start.

Dirty streaks down corners or outside walls generally mean leaky gutters and leaders; if you haven't checked them lately, do it before you paint, so your brand-new job won't be ruined the first time it rains.

Pick a dry day to paint—and make sure the wood, not just the weather is dry. Avoid a windy day, too, so all kinds of things floating through the air won't stick to the fresh paint.

Since there's almost always some sort of a breeze blowing, better make a deal with your windward neighbors not to burn leaves the day you're painting—unless, of course, you wanted the house black anyway.

FARM BRIEFS

Alfalfa is one of the oldest crops cultivated by man.

Keep dairy feed against an inside wall. Condensation from an outside wall will cause some grains to spoil.

Apples breathe much as humans. The higher the temperature the faster the breathing and the more quickly the apple will deteriorate. The coolest place in the house above freezing is the best apple storage.

Our peach trees were sprayed in early spring but still the foliage is spotted. Will another spraying be helpful?—P. R.

A—Spray them with wettable sulphur and 50% DDT a week before the fruit is picked. Follow the manufacturer's directions for mixing. In future years follow the regular spray program recommended by your local agricultural agent.

Q—Why do my Madonna and Regal lilies bloom poorly and disappear after two or three years?—H. H.

A—Without knowing the type of your soil and other growing conditions my first guess is a heavy soil too retentive of moisture. Lily bulbs must have a fertile, well-drained, sandy loam soil, they will not tolerate a soggy location. Sunlight, too, is an essential factor; and the bulbs must not be planted deeper than four inches.

Annual rye grass seeded now will give your lawn a winter carpet of green, without injury to permanent grasses.

Along Broadway

By JACK GAVER

Guy Kibbee, who played hundreds of roles in his long career on stage and screen, is now living a lie on radio and getting paid for it.

On the Mutual network's Thursday night "Pal Rod and Gun Club of the Air" Kibbee poses as a fellow who has never caught a fish or flushed a quail. Actually he is an ardent hunter and fisherman and has been all his life. He comes from Texas outdoor stock.

"You'd be surprised at the sympathetic mail I get as a result of the program," Kibbee said. "Fellows are always writing about how they never had any luck until they tried some weird charm or other and they tip me off on their favorite methods to make the fish bite. One fellow even sent me a $200 check to pay my expenses to his place where he guaranteed me I'd catch a fish. Sent the check back, of course."

TELLS TALL TALES

One of the veteran character actor's functions on the program is to relate various tall tales which listeners send in on a competitive basis. He also goes along when the show travels in season to such far-away fishing spots as Bermuda, Florida, the Bahamas or Canada.

"Sorry I had to miss the fall tuna run off Noya Scotia this year," Kibbee said. "I had a booking in a Boston night club that interfered. And I suppose you're wondering what an old gaffer like myself, who doesn't sing or dance, does in a night club. Well, I just get up there and tell a few stories. The youngsters seem to like it."

Kibbee has no particular desire to return to the rigors of Hollywood.

Around here I can just take it sort of easy, do this radio show and whatever other work I want to take on. Did a couple of plays on the stock circuit this summer, played a couple of country fairs with my monologue and generally had a good—and profitable—time. Do television now and then, but I'm not crazy about it. Too much work has to go into preparing for just one performance. I'll leave that for the younger people."

Olivia de Havilland's tour in Shaw's "Candida" will start Oct. 8 at the American Theatre in St. Louis. Ron Randall, the Australian star, has been signed to play Morell.

The tour will hit many cities in the mid-west and far west prior to stopping off in Chicago. Thomas Hammond, the producer, plans to bring the play into New York on April 14, 1952 for a four-week run.

The "world's No. 2 comedian" credits his mother with starting him on the road to a comedian's career. "She told me never to take life seriously," says Red Skelton, "that you never come out of it alive, anyway. That made sense to me."

Whatever further impetus he

needed was furnished when he was a boy of 10. He skidded and nose dived into the dust while delivering bottles of elixir at a medical show. The ensuing roar of laughter gave him food for thought. He decided being funny was the best way he could think of to make a living.

"This isn't work. It's fun. When it does get to be work, I'll quit," he says.

About this "No. 2 comedian" business.

"I have always considered myself the world's No. 2 comedian," Red says. "There are 4,000 others claiming first place."

Skelton currently is tickling the public rib in his role as the visionary inventor of a "gasamobile" in M-G-M's "Excuse My Dust," a story of the horseless carriage days in which he co-stars with newcomer Sally Forrest.

DEPARTED FROM SCRIPT

During filming of the picture Red as usual was not averse to veering from the script if he thought it would make a good gag.

Miss Forrest in one scene was trying to persuade him to give up his wild dreams and go into partnership in her father's livery stable.

"Papa will give you half interest in his horses," she said in a dutiful rehearsal of the script. "I could fix it with him."

"True enough," improvised the comedian, "but who would fix it with the horses?"

Skelton wasn't too sure he would be a success when he first got a chance in pictures. He held onto his old job as a master of ceremonies until he could learn how his first picture went over.

Snapdragons In Favor

With the introduction during the last ten years of the race of snapdragons known as rust resistant, many gardeners who had given this plant up in disgust, have again become pleased to return to its rightful place to become the best-favored of garden flowers.

The soil for snaps should be made rich by the incorporation of plenty of humus, compost or peat moss into the surface layer. If the soil is inclined to pack or become hard during summer, due to an excessive clay content, coarse sand must be mixed thoroughly with it when preparing the bed.

The reason for the need of a friable soil is that the snapdragon roots are very long and string-like, and penetrate far into the soil. They do not go deeply, however, but travel quite near the surface. This trait is a survival of the necessary natural growth that had to be made in the shallow soils where the plants once grew wild.

The majestic type of snapdragon, which is a semi-tall strain which grows about 24 inches high, is one of the best for this district. The flowers of this type are as large as any other variety.

CANTERBURY BELLS

There are three types of this easy-to-grow old English garden favorite: single, double, and cup-and-saucer Canterbury bells. All three types are available in white, pink, blue and lavender. There are no reds or yellows in this plant family.

The rosette of leaves which winters over with no damage looks much like foxglove. In spring, a centre spike grows upward, but the side branches spread too, so that the pyramidal plant is covered all over with huge colored bells.

It is very seldom that this plant is infested by either insects or diseases and should be included in every trouble-free plant list.

SWEET WILLIAMS

Sweet Williams is a cousin of the pink and carnation families. Its hardy rosettes of green-leaved crowns are neat and tidy all year long. In spring, the flat flower heads in white, pink and red rise on strong 12-inch jointed stems. They are very sweetly perfumed and are much prized for indoor flower bouquets.

For borders, there is a new very dwarf type whose flower stems grow only six inches tall.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Q—The house I just bought has a marble mantel around the fireplace, and I've bought a marble-top table to match it. How can I keep the marble clean?—G. D.

A—If you can buy marble dust, use it the way you'd use scouring powder. Otherwise use a paste made of white soap and whiting, then rinse and wipe dry.

Q—The whitewash on my brick garden wall is peeling. I like the idea of a white wall; how can I keep it that way?—J. B.

A—Use a wire brush on the brick, then scrub with vinegar and water (1 part to 20). Rinse, and when dry repaint with a white cement base paint that you mix with water.

Q—What are the peculiar looking caterpillars fastened to our arborvitae in a tiny bug-like mass of dried leaves? They are eating the foliage.—V. R.

A—They are bagworms and while found on many trees are especially damaging to arborvitae, cedar and willows. Severe infestations can kill the plants so spray with arsenate of lead or DDT. If only a few are present, hand pick and destroy.

Q—How can I eradicate ants from house and garden?—W. Y.

A—Ants in the garden are best controlled by putting cyanogas

★ 12-Step Program Reclaims Alcoholics ★

As members of Alcoholics Anonymous assemble in Victoria to discuss progress of their organization in helping alcoholics battle against the terrible loneliness and utter hopelessness of many suffering from what is described by one as an incurable, baffling, cunning disease, a number of papers have been prepared by those who have won their battle with the help of fellow members.

The human document on this page is one of them.

Grateful for what Alcoholics Anonymous has done for them, members are willing and anxious to help other recover from a habit. Without this help they believe, death, prison or the asylum is the only way out.

For 24 years before coming into Alcoholics Anonymous my very life and existence progressed steadily to the point where liquor, and my ability to procure enough, became the only desire worth living for.

Nothing but the next bottle was of any interest to me. Friends, family, jobs, opportunities, a home, and relatives, everything went down the drain as my thirst for more and still more alcohol increased. My insatiable desire, took precedence over everything that a normal human being would hold dear.

Yet many years ago, as so many others have done, I took my first drink. I cannot remember taking the first drink, nor can I remember the first time I became "tight," but I do remember so well looking forward to our regular Saturday night parties.

Maybe a dance or a house party, but always meeting the boys for a few beers before picking up the girls. Did you get a crock, Jack? Well! We've got four crocks and two cases of beer for tonight, and away we would go, everyone getting quite plastered but having a wonderful time. Then, waking up next morning . . . opening one eye; burning up inside; head as big as a tent; hitting the water faucet; the a pain; the cold towels; then Gee! Saturday again.

"THE HAIR OF THE DOG"

I cannot remember my first blackout or loss of memory, but I do remember graduating to the point of reaching for that first drink on a Sunday morning, my first of the hair of a dog—how nauseating—maybe if I try another one—ah, that's better—soon I have to lay in enough for Sunday. Now that Saturday night has arrived and gone, let's get down to some steady drinking.

My first big job on the road; covering most of Canada; generous firm, $25 a week for entertaining, five bottles of good old Haig and Haig. Now I've graduated to first-class railway hotels—big, hefty expense account—this is the life—my job, spending the company's money. What a set-up! Soon I'm not feeling too good on Monday—oh well, I won't show up today; be on the bit tomorrow. That excuse was fine, got away with it, too; had to lie, but shucks I was sick. Better, behave myself for a few days.

Looking back through the years, I had come a long way since that first drink, not only was I cheating but I had also started to lie. What a terrible cycle had been started in my life! Needless to say, my job did not last. What job could be the pattern of my drinking, became slowly and steadily worse.

With personality to burn and several connections later, my venture in business is launched—now I'll show everyone—my old boss lost a good man when he let me out—you just wait, fella—I'm going places without your guidance . . . wow, what hit me?—doesn't the staff know I'll pay them, lots more checks coming—a guy has to have a drink once in a while . . . what's the matter with the finance company? Just 'cause I missed a couple of payments on the car you'd think the world had come to an end. I wish people would quit bothering me, if they would only leave me alone I could get control of myself. . . . So I missed that big job—O.K., I was too busy anyway—what's that you say? People are beginning to lose confidence in you—who do they think they are? Why don't they pay their accounts, always kicking about something—people make me tired—let's have another drink . . . people—they make me

REACHING BOTTOM

There comes a time in every alcoholic's life when the bottom is reached.

The insane compulsion to use alcohol spells disaster.

Words can never describe the mental hell and torture I endured.

Three months after my release from prison I was a drunk again.

Not only was I cheating but I had also started to lie.

I acquired a wife, a lovely person. All she got from me was broken promises, heartaches. I robbed her too; took the best years of her life and threw them back in her face.

Always was the compulsion to have enough to drink. It didn't matter who was robbed, who got a bum check.

One will never know the terrible fear that haunts an alcoholic, sick and shaking, nerves screaming—the utter remorse of a long binge.

I was suffering from an incurable, baffling, cunning disease.

I found I could never be a social drinker if I lived to be a 100.

sick—if you do what they want they are never satisfied, and if you do what you want they still kick.

Needless to say, this attitude, together with my steady intake of more alcohol, did not keep me in business very long. It's time I was moving on anyway—who wants to hang around this place where people are always trying to regiment you?

TEN BAD YEARS

The next ten years were bad; with this kind of reasoning how could it be any other way? My periods of sobriety were consistently getting shorter and the length of my binges were getting longer, until one day all semblance of respectability, left me and my life then became one continuous binge with booze.

It is always a source of wonderment that during these final stages of complete oblivion my ego never suffered. I always thought that I was the greatest human being that God ever placed breath into. If my friends or my family crossed me up, my resentment was terrific, fed as it was by my complete selfishness. I would go to any lengths to show them that they were fooling with the wrong guy.

Always was the compulsion to have enough to drink.

It mattered not where the money came from, who was robbed by cashing a bum check; for quite some time while my senses were functioning at all I was always able to cover up to a certain extent.

For about four years I was able to work slightly, but only for the purpose of being able to buy more liquor. Somewhere along the trail I had acquired a wife, a lovely person, but with me she never had a chance. Poor girl, all she ever got from me was a lot of broken promises and a lot of heartaches, but never any cash. I robbed her too, I took the best years of her life and threw them back in her face.

It is funny, but always in the back

THEY UNDERSTOOD

For the first few minutes these men (Alcoholics Anonymous) talked to me frankly.

They said forget the wasted yesterday. The remorse of last month is what drives alcoholics mad.

For the first time in my life I was talking to men who understood me, real honest-to-goodness friends who had shared a common peril.

What a glorious feeling to reach the point where it was a thrill to wake up in the morning. Sincerity and humility are the stepping stones to a life of serenity and contentment for each of us.

We must be ready and willing at all times to be of help to those alcoholics who still do not know.

A man or woman coming into A.A. is bowled over by the wonderful fellowship that exists in any group of ex-drunks.

As long as I never lose sight of the fact that I am only one drink away from a binge I shall never experience trouble.

I shudder when I think of the hell it used to be.

of my mind was the thought that next week, or next month, I am going to quit drinking. Sure I can control this habit, all I need is will power. Nothing to it, I can quit any time. Booze will never get the best of me. I can control my drinking. How many times have I gone into a pub for just one or at the most two, and how many times have I always finished the same a week or ten days to three months later.

TERRIBLE CYCLE

There comes a time in every alcoholic's life when the very bottom is reached. We in A.A. say there is only one way out for an alcoholic, death, prison, or the asylum. We who reach the very brink of disaster and pull back because we do not like what we see on the other side are indeed most fortunate. Some of us have a short brush with the ultimate and pull back, others continue into oblivion.

Once that terrible cycle is set in motion, once that driving, insane compulsion to use alcohol as the only crutch we know in life starts, for it spells DISASTER. It spelled disaster for me, it has spelled disaster for many of us. Yet we live today and are taking our rightful place in the community to which we belong.

One will never know the terrible fear that haunts an alcoholic while suffering the hell of a hangover, fear because he thinks he is going to die, fear because he is sick and shaking, nerves screaming, the utter remorse of a long binge. God, if I only had one drink, to steady myself so that I could feel better. The utter hopelessness and futility of living and the fear of the law, the creditors, fear of even walking on the street, the terrible loneliness. The mad vicious circle is getting smaller and smaller until the gates of hell are slowly opening and you are powerless to pull back.

HUMILITY, SHAME

My world came tumbling down around my head when I arrived in prison. What utter degradation was this? At last the grim reaper was busy balancing up my account in life. I had taken everything that was decent, honorable and good and had squeezed it all to the very last drop and then screamed because suddenly, people were not playing it my way. I know that words can never describe the humility and shame that I suffered the first few weeks of my incarceration. Life is no longer worth living, the mental hell and torture that I endured. I wasn't going anywhere, I was alone with myself at last. What a record I had to comfort me in the lonely hours. My God, what can I do. The magistrate said one year with hard labor. I had finally reached the ultimate. This was one time that I could not talk my way out; fufny, my friends even failed to rally around. I was absolutely friendless and alone, utterly alone with my thoughts at last. Where was my terrific ego now? I had reached my Waterloo. I think I could have committed suicide in the very beginning. I was sure I had nothing more to live for.

THE LONG ROAD BACK

What a foolish thought—nothing more to live for. How stupid can a person get? I found a book in there which changed my life. Yes, it was the beginning of a long and hazardous road back, just a simple philosophy of doing unto others as you would have others do unto you. That was the essence of it, and from that moment my life changed. For the first time in all of my years of living I experienced peace of mind, humility, calmness, and the urge to do something for others. I found out that one has to share experience with others, one has to live positively at all times. The time from then on just flew by in prison, there was a new spring to my step and a new purpose to my life; and yes, an inner light in my eyes. For the first time in my life I had become honest with myself.

And yet, after three months of my release from prison I was drunk again. With that first drink everything I had acquired went right out of the window. My life assumed the same old pattern, the same vicious cycle was set in motion once more with but a difference, this time I realized something had to be done about my drinking, and the only source that I could contact was Alcoholics Anonymous. I did not know who they were or what they could do, but I was sure willing to find out.

BAFFLING DISEASE

Two men called on me after I had plied for help, and with a very simple test that is used by the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, I found out I was an alcoholic. Something new had been added. I was a sick individual suffering with an incurable, baffling, cunning disease known to medicine as Alcoholism. I

"Hams" Make Friends All Over The World

Short Wave Talks Factor For Peace, Help In Emergency

By TOM MERRIMAN

Clifford Armitage, father of a radio ham operator, took but a cursory interest until recently in the hobby which his son has carried on for many years. Then feeling bored one Sunday afternoon, when a heavy downpour made his usual fishing trip impossible, he strolled into the den where his son had been operating a set for 10 years or more.

He paid more attention than usual to the call cards which "hams" collect from all the stations they have contacted.

"Why, Bob," he said, "you must have talked to pretty nearly everybody in the world."

"Pretty nearly," said Bob. "Just a minute, I've got a date with a chap in South Africa."

Armitage Senior got into the act seriously for the first time and was amazed.

Together they contacted a psychiatrist in South Africa who talked like Herbert Marshall.

The South African's wife joined churly into the conversation to say her husband looked like Boris Karloff.

Then they got a game-hunter in the Belgium Congo, a doctor at Ak-lavik in charge of Eskimos there, an official of a South African diamond mine and then, closer to home, R. Bruce Scott at Bamfield, one of the most co-operative of all the "hams."

The father became so interested that he was won over to the hobby.

"It is astounding," he said, after a few weeks. "I have talked to scores of people in all parts of the world; besides talking about fishing, hunting, insurance, income tax and everything that comes into a routine conversation they have told me about big game hunting, sports and their way of life. I have told them about landing big salmon—from the lips of an expert he remarked with a grin. It's brighter, fresher, more sparkling conversation than ordinary talk, because it flows from different parts of the world and the angles are new."

FIRST NAME FRIENDS

"In a few weeks I have made 50 new friends, half of them friendly enough to call by first names. When I come back from fishing with a few big ones I tell radio friends in South Africa, Australia or New Zealand the same day."

What has particularly impressed Armitage, however, is the potential humanitarian value of short wave radio conversations such as those in which he has recently been interested.

"If in the space of a few weeks you build up friendships throughout the world so that you are even discussing family affairs, asking how the youngsters got along with their exams, where are you going for your holidays and personal things like that, surely it should be a vital factor in world harmony," he says. "How can you get into quarrels with people of other nations when you're chatting like friends with them all over the world every day."

Armitage was endorsing the views of most ham radio operators who insist that it is much more than a hobby.

They point to the help they have been able to give in case of floods and other disasters, contributions to the ranks of electronic, radar and television experts.

Most of the ham radio men on this continent belong to the International Radio Association through which they exchange ideas.

There are 90,000 of them in the United States.

There are ham stations at most army bases through which the G.I.'s abroad keep in touch with home.

Talking of distance, an Irish policeman, A.D.X. Hound as they are known, was seeking distance, trying to contact as many countries as possible in as short a time as possible.

From Oroville, California, he contacted a princess in Arabia.

The traffic cop and the princess now have frequent conversations.

EVERY COUNTRY IN WORLD

In this area, Ed. Wadsworth of Oak Bay holds a record. He has spoken to every country in the world, including Russia. Because of the enthusiasm all share a great many listeners send out cards acknowledging that they have received a "ham's" signal.

While there are senders in most countries Japanese natives are not permitted to hold licenses. They are allowed to listen but not to transmit.

A surprising number of people of other countries speak English, including most South Americans, but mainly the problem of language is overcome by the wireless international code.

MANY BLIND ENTHUSIASTS

Many blind people are among the enthusiasts, so many, in fact, that the Radio League turns out diagrams and books in Braille for them. Often they will hold conversations for a month with another "ham" before they disclose the fact they are blind.

GA, CQ, XYL

Throughout the world the "hams" language has spread. A GA with a CQ means a "ragchewer" is on the air with a "go-ahead and talk" signal, to anyone who gets it. All address one another as O.M. (old man) and age has nothing to do with it. A young lady is a YL if she is single, but XYL or OW (old woman) if she is married, also regardless of age.

ORGANIZED TO HELP

The 130 amateurs in the Victoria area are part of the Amateur Radio League in which most countries participate. They are organized to help in case of a war emergency with Ernie Savage, VE 7 FB as sections communications manager.

There is a co-ordinator for the province and, under him, emergency co-ordinators who appoint their assistants in the districts set up. Here "Nobby" Clark, VE 7 AAZ, is in charge of 75 meter operation, Dick Wild, VE 7 WL, 100 meter; Wally Wicks, VE 1 W.I., six meter; Bill Martin, VE 7 MT, two meter. Fred Diment, VE 7 M.V., vice-president of the Victoria Short Wave Club, is in charge of mobile operations.

Clarence Ferris is the area co-ordinator with Dr. Ben Nichols VE 7 SF as his right hand man.

Thirty-five of the 130 listed "hams" are in the emergency plan and it is expected more will join.

To me, the picture of Thanksgiving has always been a tall man with a tall Quaker hat, a long face, a long gun, a choirboy's collar over his dark cloak and a dead wild turkey over his shoulder. I think I know why that image confronts me when I think of the day. Back in the lower grades of school we had a story in one of our books describing the Pilgrim Fathers. Somewhere in the story was that illustration.

It has made Thanksgiving Day a remote event for me. At school it wasn't a holiday. It was merely an occasion when we took one of those light, skipping steps into American history — Canadian version, of course. Thanks giving didn't seem to have anything to do with our country. In Canada we wove our legends around Madeleine de Vercheres, whose story I've forgotten, and Laura Secord, who drove a cow one night through enemy lines.

LAURA'S STORY stays fresh because she was an earlier member of the late Judge Peter Lampman's family, and almost everybody in town liked Pete Lampman.

Then, too, since our family's interest in agriculture extended only to back-lot gardening, we didn't have any great earthy surge of thanksgiving for the products of the soil. Harvest was something they did back on the prairies or celebrated in church. With us, it was a chore that ended when the potatoes were dug and the onions were laid out on chicken wire frames to dry in the basement.

Then, too, we'd never been hungry and we never thought of being thankful because we hadn't been. Enough to eat was a matter of course, not something to be remarked upon.

Now we have a holiday on Thanksgiving. Perhaps the churches give it a little more attention and maybe there's an inclination in some families to think in terms of thanks for some of our blessings.

THE KIDS WHO were in school with me are edging into their forties and they probably look at our advantages a little more clearly than they used to. A lot of them have reason to give thanks for escape from the cruel punishment of war. They do that, sincerely and effectively, on Armistice Day.

But somehow or other, Thanksgiving Day hasn't quite jelled yet. We take it and we're thankful because it's a holiday. Back of that we have a hazy idea that we ought to give thanks more definitely for bigger things.

One of the troubles seems to be that we haven't created any clearly identified Canadian symbolism for Thanksgiving. Stacks of pumpkins and sheaves of wheat are fine. So are preserves and the other products of the fields. But they can look an awful lot like Halloween decorations or left-over stalls from a fall fair.

In today's schools, I'm told, the significance of Thanksgiving Day is outlined. Maybe from the classroom some central theme, expressive of a common national experience, will emerge to stamp an individuality on the occasion.

WHEN YOU LOOK over your impressions of festivals you see clearly, they usually date from the influences brought to bear on you in childhood.

The Christian symbolism of Christmas and Easter may be a little confused by the pagan feasting and gift exchanging of Santa Claus and the charming stories of the bunny, but at least they're definite.

Close your eyes and see what picture comes to you of Thanksgiving. If you had the same schooling as I did, three will get you 10 that you'll be visualizing a tall man, in a tall Quaker hat, with a long face and a long gun. You'll notice, too, if you look closer, that he has long hair. Maybe that's the spirit of Thanksgiving, but he's a hard guy to warm up to.

Public Speaking Classes For 'Y'

Classes in public speaking will commence at the Y.M.C.A. Monday, at 8 p.m. The classes will be under the instruction of Laurie Westendale, and will deal with public speaking and meeting procedure.

Classes will run for two hours each Monday night for 16 weeks. Feature selections from "Biosom Time" will be played on the music hour in the Mural Room Sunday night.

It will be a recorded program. To finish the evening, a color film on fishing in the Rockies will be shown.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES tomorrow will mark the 25th anniversary of the ministry of Dr. J. B. Rowell at Central Baptist Church. Dr. Rowell, who has become an integral part of the Baptist community in Victoria since his call in 1926, will receive congratulations from hundreds of friends and parishioners.

Royal Reception Plan Set

Plans are in the final stage for the 25-minute visit of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh at City Hall, Oct. 22.

Mayor Percy E. George today announced: A guard of honor composed of 24 civic employee war veterans; broadcasting of his address of welcome from the council chamber; guest list of 120 people, exclusive of those taking part in the presentation ceremony.

Veterans will be lined from the curbside to City Hall entrance. From the entrance to the foot of the main stairs, members of the Girls' Drill Team, in specially designed costume, will form another guard.

REHEARSAL PLANNED

A rehearsal, with two civic employees taking the part of the royal couple, will be held Oct. 20. City Hall will be closed until after the ceremony on Oct. 22, Mayor George said.

Invited guests are asked to be in the council chamber not later than 9.30. The visitors arrive at 10.10. William Tickle and two others will form a musical ensemble, to play before the Royal visitors come.

As the Royal couple halt before their chairs in the council chamber, a few bars of music will be played, following which the mayor will read the welcoming address and present the city's gift of a leather-bound album. Mrs. George will present flowers to the Princess. Loudspeakers will carry the address to the throngs outside.

SIGN GUEST BOOK

The visitors will then sign the guest book with the same pen and at the same table, used during the visit of Princess Elizabeth's parents in 1939.

Possibility of having the R.C.N. band play outside City Hall is being explored. Officials hope to have a band strike up God Save The King or O Canada, to have the Royal couple halt a few paces after emerging from their car, thus giving the crowds on the street a chance to see them.

Hopes Dim For Early Strike End

Further Meetings Between Groups Not Scheduled

Victoria's shipyard boilermakers' strike was 11 days old today. And while last week-end there were high hopes for a quick settlement, this week-end there were none.

A company-union meeting Friday afternoon apparently accomplished nothing. No further meetings are scheduled.

Both V.M.D. and Yarrow's closed today for the Thanksgiving holiday week-end.

On Tuesday it is expected more of the non-striking workmen, who are becoming increasingly restless, will return to the yards despite boilermaker pickets.

Some went back Thursday, on Friday there were about 360 men at their jobs.

The boilermakers' union has a general membership meeting scheduled for Sunday afternoon at 2 at the Esquimalt Road headquarters.

Scholarships To Be Awarded V.C. Students

More than 30 scholarships, with a total value of $3,500 will be presented at the annual assembly of Victoria College, Friday evening, Oct. 19, in the auditorium.

Details of the assembly were made known today by Dr. W. H. Hickman, vice-principal and chairman of the college's scholarship committee.

Dr. Joseph A. Pearce, director emeritus of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory and immediate past president of the Royal Society of Canada, will give the address. His topic will be "The Spirit of Science."

Bursary donors, representatives of clubs and business firms and individuals donating scholarships will attend the assembly.

First-year student winners are now at the college in their second year. Other prize winners, most of whom are now in their third year at U.B.C., will be at the college for the ceremony.

ADMIRAL DUE HOME

Rear Admiral Wallace B. Creery, Flag Officer Pacific Coast, was expected home tonight or Sunday after his flying visit to Canadian ships serving under United Nations' command in Korea.

AVOID FELLOW CANADIANS

Diplomat Offers Travel Advice

Victoria College students got some first-hand advice Friday from a Frenchman and his attractive wife on how to see Europe and to get to understand its problems.

Edmond Bernard, cultural attaché at the French Embassy at Ottawa on a tour of Canadian colleges and universities, said the first thing a Canadian should do on arriving in Europe was to "avoid other Canadians like pests."

"Live and mix with the people of the country you are visiting," he said. "Try to forget some of the comforts and luxuries found in your own country. If you do, you will get to understand the

All Cigarette Prices Jump By Two Cents

Another tobacco company has increased the price of its cigarettes from 41 to 43 cents a package it was learned today from Victoria wholesalers.

Wholesalers said they received word from MacDonald's Ltd. to place the two-cent boost on all its cigarette brands immediately. No reason was given by the company for the increase.

The company's action means that all cigarettes will now be selling at the same price in retail stores.

Imperial Tobacco and subsidiary companies boosted the price of their cigarettes last week following a strike and wage increase granted to their employees. The MacDonald company was not involved in the wage dispute.

Wholesalers said all new stocks of cigarettes are being sold at the new price. Old stocks, however, were still being sold by some downtown stores at 41 cents a package.

City Woman Hurt In Car Collision

Four persons were hurt at Parkville Thursday when a car driven by Mrs. Laura Doble, 302 Moss Street, Victoria, and taxi by Andrew Kerr met in a head-on highway collision during heavy rainfall.

Mrs. M. Doyle, Parkville, passenger in the taxi, was taken to hospital with head injuries, a possible fractured shoulder and body lacerations. Kerr was treated for minor hurts. Mrs. Doble and her passenger, Miss Betty Lapp, Courtenay, suffered minor hurts.

Reeve Denies Use Of Veto

Pickles Claims Over-Riding Action Taken To Allow Cooling-Off Period

Reeve Sydney Pickles of Central Saanich today protested against having been accused of vetoing certain proposals put forward by his council.

At the same time, he made known his reasons for wanting a truck recently purchased by the municipality held in reserve.

"There has been a misunderstanding," the reeve declared. "It has been said that I have vetoed certain council motions. That is not so. No reeve has the power of veto. Section 28 of the Municipal Act simply empowers the reeve to intervene and temporarily suspend passage of a resolution when he deems it necessary. The resolution must be returned to council for reconsideration within 30 days and then there is nothing to stop councillors from voting the same way."

Reeve Pickles admitted he had used this power on several occasions when he suspected his councillors were acting hastily and a "cooling off" period was needed.

"What I have done could not be reasonably construed as vetoing," he said. "A veto is something final which cannot be circumvented."

On the matter of his recent squabble with councillors, who wanted the new public works truck put into immediate use, Reeve Pickles explained:

"We face certain capital expenditures and I thought it might be necessary to sell the truck. Because of this, I felt the truck should be held as a contingency."

ADMITTS USING POWERS

Two persons were injured in accidents on the rain-soaked city streets Friday afternoon and early this morning, police report.

In fairly good condition at Jubilee Hospital is Robert Rankin, 67, 612 Bay Street. He suffered head lacerations, bruises and severe shock. Police said the car Rankin was driving was in collision with one driven by Herbert J. Handysides, 943 Darwin Road, at Bay and Blanshard Streets Friday afternoon.

Vehicle damage was heavy. Robert R. Benson, 16, of 922 Old Esquimalt Road, was reported in good condition at the Jubilee. He suffered bruises to the face, both legs and a head cut when the motorcycle he was driving on Johnson Street Extension at 12:07 this morning was in collision with a car. Police said the car driver was Donald Silcock, Erskine Road, View Royal.

Native Son, A. J. Maynard Dies Suddenly

A native son and well-known city businessman, Albert James (Hub) Maynard, 68, died suddenly Friday at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Mr. Maynard operated Maynard & Sons, Auctioneers, on Johnson Street for many years. Before joining his father in founding the present business 49 years ago, he was with the law firm of Langley and Martin for four years.

A charter member of Gorge Vale Golf Club and a Rotarian for 20 years, Mr. Maynard was also a past master of Camosun Lodge No. 60, A.F. & A.M.

Canon George Biddle will conduct funeral services Tuesday at 3.15 from St. John's Church. Masonic rites will be held at the graveside. Sands are in charge of funeral arrangements.

Surviving are his widow, two daughters, Mrs. A. R. Roberts, Victoria, and Miss H. Elaine, Prince Rupert; two brothers, J. W. of Victoria, and G. H. of Mayne Island; two sisters, Miss Laura L. Maynard and Mrs. R. E. Macdonald, Victoria, and one grandson.

We salute all of them . . . and give grateful thanks that they live, dream and work in Victoria!

SHOPPING GUIDE

Penny Fails To See Humor—But You May Enjoy It!

By PENNY SAVER

If I can control my hysteria long enough, I will attempt to tell you about the "experience" I had this morning.

Oh! It was a panic! But I'm now a nervous wreck.

In my travels I made the "mistake" of dropping into a shop that was simply loaded with things to scare the daylights out of you.

I entered the store in high spirits thinking what a dandy change this would be for my column.

I walked in and innocently said, "Good morning, what's new?"

"Hah!"

Let someone who is a mere shadow of their former self tell you that is definitely not the thing to say when you are imprisoned in a shop that is chock full of things that some people have the mistaken idea are "jokes."

Very funny! Very funny indeed!

Do you realize that within two minutes I had been hit in the face with a snake, blinded with a squirt of water, shocked by jokes, and was gasping after chewing "hot" gum.

Some may live through experiences like that, but if it had kept up much longer I am sure I would have passed into the great beyond.

Yes, it surely was funny.

I almost had a change of heart towards this fellow when he kindly offered to jot down a few notes for me about the "jokes" he had.

"Now that's nice of him," I thought.

He noted a few things and then handed me the list.

I glanced at it and went on to look, standing at a safe distance, at some of the other things that scare people out of ten years' growth.

In a minute or so I thought I'd better just check his list to make sure I didn't get the same things. I looked at one side of the paper, then the other. Nothing was written on it at all.

"Steady now Penny," I said to myself. "You'll be alright in a minute. Just sit down and count to ten."

I heard a faint chuckle from the other side of the counter. It was then that I learned about disappearing ink.

Never let it be said that I advise you to buy such nerve-racking articles, but I must admit you'd have a barrel of fun if they reacted on your friends the way they did on me.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Most Reducers Will Reach Temporary Standstill Point

The average woman who wishes to lose a pound a day will have to cut her calorie intake to around 1,000 a day. People vary in this, some will lose a pound a day on a 1,200 calories a day, while others might have to cut their calories a little lower. You should not go below this count without a doctor's advice and you should not go above it for a pound a day loss.

If you have a great deal of weight to lose, you should not try to lose this rapidly because the results will not be attractive. Lines and bags and flabbiness result from too rapid reducing. You do not have time to tone up with exercise, and the skin does not have time to shrink to its new proportions.

If you have only about 10 pounds to lose, this rapid method is fine. You will suffer no harm in health or beauty if you eat a scientifically-planned diet which gives you 1,000 calories each day. This is all right, too, as an encouraging starter for the woman who has 20 or more pounds to drop, but after that, the calorie count should be boosted to around 1,400 a day.

When you begin dieting you may not lose a pound a day, but after a few days the scales will show you to be a few pounds lighter. In a long reducing trail, you will come to a point where the scales remain absolutely the same for a time. This is always discouraging for women unless they know that it is to be expected. Many women lose their first 15 or 20 pounds successfully, and then come to a standstill. Don't worry if this happens to you. Keep on with your diet and soon your scales will begin moving in the desired direction.

Reducing is so simple, once you make up your mind to it and if you do it in the correct way. If you can take exercise along with your diet, it is highly preferable. This speeds the loss in inches where you most want it and tones you up.

If you would like to have my nine-day reducing diet booklet which tells you how to lose from 5 to 10 pounds in nine days' time, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Prairie Oil Boom Arrives At Last

By HARRY YOUNG, Times Business Editor

For every share traded on Wall Street this week, three shares were traded on Toronto exchange. This, in broad perspective, tells the story of the most remarkable week in the 17-year history of the Toronto Stock Exchange.

During five days' trading, 27,231,000 shares changed hands, while the total turnover in the same period on New York was 9,460,000.

Only on Monday did the Toronto daily total fail to reach 4,000,000 shares.

On Wednesday the volume of 6,478,000 shares was a new record. It topped the 6,350,000 shares total set up on August 27, but yesterday the market surged over and topped with Wednesday record with a turnover of 6,639,000.

The tremendous volume was due chiefly to the frantic buying of lower priced western oils. The week's turnover in Redwater-Piccadilly was 917,789; in Western Homestead 913,270, and in Mid-Continental 898,650. This caused Redwater-Piccadilly to advance from 65 cents to 85 cents, Western Homestead from 65 cents to 1.40 and Mid-Continental from 48 cents to 61 cents.

Other huge traders were New Pacalta, Del Rio, McDougall Secur, Long Island Petroleum, Anchor, Tower Continental, Oil Selections, Superior, Trend and Kroy.

Individually some of the spectacular rises of the week were Calvan from 5.40 to 6.70, Federated 7.50 to 8.10, Royalite 17.50 to 19.50, Britalta 4.20 to 4.60, Dalhousie 39 cents to 40 cents and Mercury 19 cents to 20 cents.

This, in effect, is the western oil bull market which has been anticipated for so long. Why it should burst just at this moment when negotiations about the export of gas and oil are as much in the air as ever, is not entirely clear.

One assumption is that Britain, now expelled from Iran, will turn its attention to the Albian field, not only with its trained technicians and equipment.

Already Trinidad Leaseholds, one of Britain's leading oil operators, is beginning an intensive drilling campaign, on behalf of a number of the smaller Albian companies who have reservations but insufficient capital to get on with the job.

It would seem that any small company with considerable reservations of possible looking acreage is liable to find itself face to face with attractive financial propositions from some of the big fellows from across the Atlantic. For those who arrive late on the scene as the British are doing, there is little other alternative if they hope to catch up on the already established Albian oil leaders.

However it was not the oils which started off the most sensational trading week in Canadian history, but the base metals and the gold.

The spark came when it was announced (1) that the International Monetary Fund would not debar its members from trading in the free market, and (2) that the United States would raise its price for lead and zinc by 2 cents per pound.

The gold decision was responsible for a moderate increase in the gold averages on Toronto and Montreal exchanges, but the base metal news made the wider appeal, and quickly sent the base metal average through to a new high last Wednesday.

Consolidated Smelters, with their huge smelting output at Trail, and with their big lead-zinc resources, are obviously going to profit handsomely by any increase in the U.S. price of base metals, and on the week, Smelters' shares rose $6 to a new high of $189. This in turn pushed the shares of C.P.R., largest shareholders in Smelters, up from 33½ to 36.

Most of the British Columbia mines have a leaning content in their ores, and the U.S. increase should encourage them to greater efforts. Among the mining issues higher was Silvan Consolidated, which is not yet in production, but has considerable ore in view.

Pulps and papers, for so long the market leaders in Canada, went off the beam this week. While their average dipped 40.30 points, all other sections of the Toronto and Montreal markets were bounding ahead. Even golds, so long in the doldrums, kept moving upward in pace with base metals.

Western oils zoomed over their previous high, finishing right on top last night at 122.95. Industrials gained steadily most of the week, but finished slightly below the highs they had recorded last month. Base metals failed to hold their new top of 198.55 recorded Wednesday.

ALBERTA OIL REPORT

Gough Discovery Rates 1,788 Bbls From 80 Feet

By C. V. MYERS

CALGARY—Gulf's D-2 Gough discovery, midway between Stettler and Big Valley and about nine miles from each, rates 1,788 barrels a day from 80 feet of pay. Gough No. 15 is a north offset and will start drilling at once.

Moving three miles southward and within six miles of Big Valley Gulf drill its Ave No. 2 wildcat. B.A. Clie is presently testing D-2 and is getting 15 barrels an hour of oil and mud. Interval was not announced. The South Calmar offset to the discovery is drilling at 2,850.

Union Oil has abandoned its Bow River wildcat in southern Alberta at 3,460 feet.

TRIES FOR TRIASSIC

Hudson Bay Union Texaco Kamelin Creek No. 1, a big gasser in the Peace River and Gething sands, has plugged back from total depth to try for Triassic oil production at 3,775 feet. The well showed some oil on test while drilling. The well is about 30 miles west and a little south of Shell B.A. Bluesky.

Highwood Sage, offsetting the B.A. South Calmar D-3 discovery quarter, is now deepening below 5,600 feet, within about 900 feet of B.A. D-3 reef.

INTEREST SECURED

Mill City and Leduc Consolidated have bought a 30 per cent net interest each in a quarter section about two and a half miles northeast of Wizard Lake. The pair will drill, recovering costs out of 80 per cent of any production obtained.

Spencer Investments have bought 400,000 shares of Mill City Petroleum at 20 cents a share and have an option to Dec. 31 on another 400,000 shares at 30 cents. Cal. Standard has completed its 21st Acheson oil well. Wellbourne 8-3 rates 1,539 barrels a day on a one-half inch choke.

Anglo Canadian, which has an eight section farmout from Socomey Vacuum at Twinning, 20 miles east of Big Valley, has spudded, set surface casing and taken in Calmont and Kroy half its interest. Socomey and Anglo split 50-50 and Kroy and Calmont equally share half the Anglo interest.

PROMISING GAS FIELD

Details released on another gas well in the Gething area, about 100 miles east of Calgary, being developed by Canadian Delphi on farmout lands from Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas, indicate that area as a promising major gas field.

To date 10 wells have been drilled in the about 10 square mile area, resulting in eight sizable gassers, one dry hole, and another recent completion, details of which are expected to be released shortly.

Latest data released is on Cessford No. 9, completed around the middle of September; Cessford No. 9 gave gas at an estimated rate between 6,000,000 and 8,000,000 cubic feet daily during test through perforated interval 3,292 to 3,334 feet. The well is now shut in and further tests will be run later.

Grain Must Move Freely, Says Howe
OTTAWA (CP)—Faced with a grain storage and transportation crisis, Trade Minister Howe has empowered the Board of Grain Commissioners to relax its regulations and find additional storage space to stockpile a record prairie wheat crop.

Under a new order-in-council passed under the government's emergency powers, the three-man board will be permitted to license even such buildings as skating rinks and community halls if they are available and found suitable for storage.

That will ensure, said Mr. Howe, "that as much as possible of the large crop will be suitably stored."

The same pattern was followed during the Second World War when even some churches were used to stockpile bumper wheat crops.

But the immediate need, added Mr. Howe in a statement, is to get the wheat and other grains moved to markets.

He authorized the board to defer its official weighing of grain, which is usually done when the grain reaches terminal points, to whenever it would cause the least interruption in the grain movement.

In view of Mr. Howe's statement, it is believed that many of the grain ships on the Great Lakes which were switched over to ore some time ago will revert to the grain trade.

Business Outlook Good, Says Adman
"The business outlook for next year is good," J. Neal Reagan, president of the Advertising Association of the West, told members of Victoria Ad and Sales Club at a dinner meeting in the Pacific Club last night.

Mr. Reagan, in business life, manager of McCann-Ericson's Hollywood office, told the Victoria admen that "high ethical and moral standards" must be maintained.

"It's not enough for business to earn profits," he said. "It must deserve them."

Mr. Reagan, who is a brother of actor Ronald Reagan, was introduced by "Chick" Collier, executive secretary of A.A.W. Mr. Collier said that the original concept of a far-west advertising association originated in Victoria in 1903 with a group whose sole surviving member is Tom Keen of Spokane. Morley Collins presided and Andy Stewart thanked the speaker.

Grocers Sell More

Higher sales during the fiscal year beginning June 3 are reported by Justin M. Cork, president of Loblaw Groceries. Earnings are being maintained at last year's record level, and prospects for the remaining months appear favorable, he said to shareholders at annual meeting. Total of stores in operation is 144.

McIntyre Gains Dollar On Wall Street Today

NEW YORK (AP)—Prices were mixed today in the stock market with trading attention focused on a handful of issues.

One of these was St. Louis-San Francisco Railway, up as much as two points at times and active at a high for the year.

Today was the first Saturday session after the four-month summer recess.

Trading started fast with prices leaning higher. In the final hour, however, there was some profit-taking that cut back many of the gainers and sent a few more stocks to the losing side.

Higher were Santa Fe, Anaconda Copper, American Smelt.

BEDTIME STORY

by Thornton W. Burgess

Wise is he who holds his tongue. From him no secrets can be wrung. —Old Mr. Toad.

In Farmer Brown's garden Welcome Robin watched Old Mr. Toad and Young Toad bury themselves. He had seen Old Mr. Toad do the same thing before for they were old-time friends. He had seen other members of Old Mr. Toad's family do the same thing. Despite the many times he had seen this done he couldn't get used to it. They buried themselves completely. Each dug a hole under himself, and as he dug sank lower and lower until finally the earth fell in over him.

Hardly were they completely buried when Mr. Blacksnake came slithering from among the cabbages. He paused to look this way and that way. He seemed to be disappointed.

"Are you looking for someone?" asked Welcome Robin, as politely as he knew how. He doesn't like Mr. Blacksnake and it wasn't easy to be polite.

"I'm looking for Old Mr. Toad or one of his family. Have you seen any of them about?" asked Mr. Blacksnake.

"Why do you want to know?" asked Welcome Robin.

"Is that any business of yours?" hissed Mr. Blacksnake. "It might be," declared Welcome Robin. "I am rather fond of Old Mr. Toad. I have known him for a long time. I would hate to see any harm happen to him."

HINTS FOR TOAD

Mr. Blacksnake said nothing. He began to slowly move about this way and that. He continually darted his slender tongue out. You know it is forked, which makes it look like a double tongue. That tongue is very important to their owners. It is by means of their tongues that they learn much of what is about them.

Several times Mr. Blacksnake crawled right over Old Mr. Toad and Young Toad buried in the ground. Welcome Robin wanted to chuckle, but he didn't. He was too wise to do that. He was fearful that if he did so, Mr. Blacksnake might suspect where Old Mr. Toad was.

"Are you very hungry?" asked Welcome Robin. He tried to sound very polite.

"Yes, I am," hissed Mr. Blacksnake.

"Well, I hope you stay hungry," snapped Welcome Robin, which of course wasn't a kind thing to say. He was thinking of those eggs Mr. Blacksnake had stolen, and of the baby birds that Mr. Blacksnake had taken from their nests and others he would take if he had a chance.

Meanwhile, down in the ground, Old Mr. Toad and Young Toad were keeping quiet just as they had once before when Mr. Blacksnake's cousin Bluffer the Adder had come looking for them. Once more they had proved how important it is to be prepared at all times for what can happen.

Claim Letters Prove Slaying Of L. Adamic

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia. (Reuters) — The newspaper Borba today published letters by American-Yugoslav writer Louis Adamic to "serve as proof that his death was not due to suicide."

Adamic's body was found in his morning farmhouse at Millford, N.J. Sept. 4. He had two bullet wounds in the head and a foreign-made .22 rifle lay across his knees. Kerosene-soaked rags were scattered through the house.

The letters, to friends in his native Yugoslavia, expressed fears for his own and his wife's life. One of the messages, to Dr. Slavko Zore, deputy minister of trade, said Adamic left his wife in a California hotel because "I had reason to believe the two of us, or I alone, were not safe on my farm because of the book."

(New Jersey authorities reaffirmed their belief Sept. 27 that Adamic's death was a suicide. But they were investigating the possibility he had been murdered by Communist agents.)

I.W.A. Meet Clears Pearce, Simmons

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials of the International Woodworkers of America (I.W.A.) in Vancouver have been advised that two men dropped from the union in 1948 have been readmitted by the I.W.A. at its 15th annual convention in Denver, Colo.

They are Jack Pearce and Roy Simmons. Victoria members ousted with Harold Pritchett and other alleged Communists during the I.W.A. split three years ago. Delegates at the convention found the two were not connected with Pritchett's movement.

Czech Envoy In Montreal Resigns; Chooses Freedom

OTTAWA (CP) — Miroslav Mares, 39-year-old commercial attaché at the Czech consulate in Montreal, said today he has resigned his post rather than return to his Communist-dominated homeland. He has obtained permission from the immigration department to remain in Canada.

He said in an interview that he had decided to join the growing list of those who have chosen "freedom" rather than return to homes behind the Iron Curtain. At least 10 Czech consular officials and employees have resigned since 1948 and chosen Canada as their home.

In Canada since 1948, Mares said he had decided "long ago" that he would like to remain in Canada. He finally made up his mind when he recently received an order to return to Prague for consultation.

"Now I am job hunting," he said with a smile.

A former business executive in Czechoslovakia, he plans to look first for work in Montreal where he has a home with his wife and three children.

"Somebody may ask why I did not resign my job when I came to Canada, knowing what kind of government I was going to represent," he said. "This question can easily be answered. I tried hard to be a good representative of Czechoslovak industry and foreign trade, regardless of the form of government there...."

King Will Cancel Australian Tour

CANBERRA (UP) — Authorities here said today that King George VI has decided to give up his scheduled Australian tour because of his recent operation.

The sources said Princess Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, will make the tour instead of the King, Queen and Princess Margaret who had been scheduled to sail for Australia in January.

PRAIRIE ROUND-UP

Earl Of Derby Sees Tory Win

CALGARY (CP).—The Earl of Derby is hoping for a Conservative victory in the forthcoming British elections. Accompanied by his wife, Lady Isabel, the youthful English peer visited Calgary Friday on a three-and-a-half week holiday tour of Canada.

Admitted with a smile that he was looking forward to a Tory win, the Earl predicted one "by a small margin."

President of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce and a director of the London & Lancashire Insurance Co. and of a bank, the Earl has a number of business interests in the United Kingdom.

Asked if there were any financial reasons for his visit to Canada, he replied with a smile that "individuals can't get money out of England for that sort of thing."

Will Reinstall 'Subsidy' On Coal

CALGARY (CP).—The federal government will temporarily reinstate the $250 per net ton subsidy for strip mine coal being shipped to Ontario, Hon. George Prud'homme, Federal Minister of Mines and Technical Surveys said here Friday. Government officials in Ottawa, where the proposal was approved Wednesday, said it probably will be a month or two before the study of subvention arrangements has been completed.

Members of the coal board are currently touring Western Canada coal districts making a first-hand study.

Government policy on April 1, 1951, cut off subventions to strip mine operators. The "subsidy" is paid to transportation companies thus allowing Alberta coal to compete in Ontario.

Mr. Prud'homme emphasized that the reinstatement is temporary and when the coal board finished its study a recommendation will be made to change the whole subvention set-up.

A date-line for the subventions, to be given to selected Alberta mines, may be added to the order-in-council which is expected to be drawn up shortly. This date may be the same as that in the older order-in-council which stated that only mines operating and shipping prior to December 31, 1948, would be eligible for assistance.

The subvention will apply only to quality coal.

Churchill Port Season Studied

WINNIPEG (CP).—A British shipping official is scheduled to fly to the northern Port of Churchill, Man., this week-end where it is reported he will study the possibility of extending the shipping season.

The R.C.A.F. announced last night it would take Sir Clement Jones, chairman of the Commonwealth Shipping committee, to Churchill Sunday for this purpose. He will reach Winnipeg by Trans-Canada Airlines.

The 21st season of the Port of Churchill officially ended Thursday with the departure of Ss. Warkworth, bound for the United Kingdom carrying 346,800 bushels of wheat. Twenty-one cargoes of grain have been shipped from Churchill this year, for the port's biggest season in history.

Up to Sept. 27, the port had cleared about 6,270,000 bushels of wheat, and there was 1,144,000 in store. It was unofficially estimated the increase this year over last would be about 500,000 bushels.

An increase also was reported in incoming cargo.

A delegation of western farmers recently urged in Ottawa that the government underwrite ship insurance to extend the Churchill shipping season as one means of easing the congestion in Prairie grain storage.

Music Prescribed For World's Ills

EDMONTON (CP).—Edward Johnson, chairman of the Board of the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto, yesterday prescribed music as a cure for the world's ills.

"If the United Nations had a language everyone could understand, as musicians understand music, it wouldn't have nearly as much trouble," he said in a luncheon address.

"The world's turmoil stems from a feeling of uncertainty. If music could be a major part of everyone's education—and on an international scale—it would provide a strong prop against that feeling."

Says Milk Orders Baffled Ministers

VANCOUVER (CP).—A charge was made before the provincial milk board hearing here that not one cabinet minister understood the orders of the board on milk prices last year.

Basil Gardom, president of the Independent Milk Producers' Co-operative Association, made the charge Friday during a short-lived verbal battle with A. H. Mercer, general manager of the Fraser Valley Milk Producers' Association.

Mercer challenged various remarks by Gardom and termed him a "prosecuting attorney who put me on trial," taking a "responsibility you have not got."

Raschi Ousted In 5th Inning

POLO GROUNDS, N.Y.—The New York Giants shelled righthander Vic Raschi off the mound in the fifth by scoring five runs and took a 2-1 lead in the World Series by trouncing the Bronx Bombers 6-2 today.

Whitey Lockman's three-run homer into the left field stands just inside the foul line climaxed the big Giant inning. The Giants had scored their first run in the second when Willie Mays' single scored Bob Thomson, who had doubled.

The Yanks rallied in the eighth, loading the bases with two out. Jim Hearn then walked Collins to force in the Yankee run. Sheldon Jones relieved Hearn and put out the side.

Woodling hit a homer in the ninth for the second Yank run.

Bolton Holds Slim Lead Second Spot Rivals Tie

LONDON (Reuters).—Bolton Wanderers held on to a slender one-point lead at the top of the English First Division today after a general shake-up of leading position in the table which brought Manchester United and Preston North End hard on their heels.

Bolton, which took over the leadership last week, was held at home to a 1-1 tie by Sunderland while Preston, with a 2-0 defeat of Arsenal and Manchester United, which edged Derby County 2-1, moved into a joint tie for second spot.

Both Preston and Manchester moved past Arsenal. Tottenham Hotspurs, last year's champions, were surprisingly beaten at home by Manchester City, 2-1.

Aston Villa's defeat was the major upset of the day. The Villa men, second until today, were drubbed 4-1 by Stoke City, bottom of the table for some time, and fighting desperately to climb out of the cellar.

BULLETINS

Fool Wins Futurity

NEW YORK (AP).—Green-tree Stable's Tom Fool won the $111,410 futurity today at Belmont Park, beating nine two-year-old rivals in the 6½ furlong dash. Prime was second with Jet's Date third.

Poles Charged

WARSAW, Poland (AP).—The secretary of exiled former Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk today was accused of working with the Polish underground and western correspondents to get information out of the country. The secretary, Maria Hulewicz, went on trial with three other members of the Polish Peasants Party.

Arrest Beauty

PARIS (AP).—Green-eyed Madame Sylvie Paul, 38, has confessed that she killed Madame Jeanne Perron, 58-year-old hotel keeper, in a jealous quarrel and walked up her body in a basement, police announced today. Police found the body, bricked into the wall of a cheap hotel near the Eiffel Tower.

TOUR GETS TOP NEWS COVERAGE

OTTAWA (CP).—The press and other information agencies are throwing more manpower into coverage of the Royal tour than on any news story in Canada's history.

To produce the millions of written and spoken words and thousands of pictures that will tell the story of the tour to Canada and other countries, almost 4,500 newspaper and magazine writers, radio personnel and still and movie cameramen have been accredited to cover the activities of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

Officials of the tour say this is far more than the number on the 1939 Canadian tour of the King and Queen, up to now the high spot of Canadian news coverage from the standpoint of the number of correspondents assigned to the job.

U.N. Forces Win Grim Ridge Fight

Battles Flare On East Korean Front

U.S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea (AP).—American and French infantrymen, charging with fixed bayonets behind flame-throwers, today seized virtually all of bloody "Heartbreak Ridge."

The fighting flared up suddenly in the eastern Korea mountains as the Allied offensive in the west ground to a halt—with most objectives secured.

In the air, United States jets took on the Reds at 3:1 odds. The Americans lost one plane but probably destroyed one Red fighter and damaged two.

There was no new move toward reopening truce talks.

BIGGEST DRIVE

The western offensive along a 40-mile front by 100,000 men from nine United Nations gained up to five miles in four days. It was the biggest Allied drive in three months. The Commonwealth Division spearheaded the attack.

The Allies moved into the best positions they have held in the west in a year, and sent patrols reaching out as much as three miles in front of their newly won hills.

The new line formed a parapet of defenses north of the winding Imjin River.

The long-stalemate Battle of Heartbreak Ridge erupted suddenly in a surprise night attack by American and French troops.

Infantrymen of the U.S. 2nd Division's 23rd Regiment, charging with fixed bayonets, stormed to the top of a 3,000-foot peak. They captured it for the third time in a month.

KILL 900

French troops swept up another slope of the peak with little trouble. Artillery was credited with killing 900 Reds.

The U.S. 8th Infantry Regiment captured a peak dominating Mundung Valley. The U.S. 9th Regiment, on the western side of the valley, fought slowly up another tall mountain against stubborn resistance.

(Reuters News Agency reported last night that Commonwealth forces—including Canadians—wrested a mountain "Magnit Line" from the Chinese in a three-mile gain.)

Monday being Thanksgiving Day and a statutory holiday, no edition of the Daily Times will be published. Tuesday's Times will carry a complete round-up of week-end news and sport together with the regular Times features.
